The Right Of Proposal

By SARA L. WHITING

Charles and Edward Duffield were of opposite dispositions, Charles being one of those outspoken, generous fellows whom every one loves. He was older than his brother, who was selfish, polite and practical. When Charles had finished his education his father, who was a manufacturer on a large scale, offered his elder son an interest in his business. The offer was declined with the words: "Father, I would bring you to bankruptcy within two years. There is not a business hair in my head. I shall study art."

Mr. Duffield took his second son out of college, put him into his factory and advanced him rapidly. He wrote Charles, who was in Italy studying art. "Since you have decided to spend a dreamer's life perhaps you will be able to live on dreams." To this the son replied that he understood perfectly his father's life had been that of a business man and it was natural that he should look at things in a business light. He, Charles, was born with an artist's temperament and would be happy in his work.

Both Charles and Edward Duffield had been attentive to the same girl, Ethel Sanger was one to keep her own counsel. Up to a certain point neither brother had offered himself to her, though Edward had come very near it. But no one except the lady knew how the matter stood between the two. Charles on going to Italy at the time he declined his father's proposition left Edward master of the field.

Edward made an excellent business man. He had a certain faculty that is valuable in business. He would as a buyer grind the seller and as a seller get the best price for his goods. Besides, he could figure expenses down to the lowest notch. He assumed first place under his father and worked so hard that he undermined his health. His doctor ordered him away, and he started on a trip around the world. He had been trying to induce Miss Sanger to engage herself to him for some time, but without success. Just before he started on his tour he made a last attempt and succeeded. Edward gave her to understand that if he could go abroad with the anticipation of claiming her as his bride he would have a better chance to regain his health. She considered it under the circumstances her duty to accept him.

While Edward was away his mother died at the same time and wrote Charles begging him to return to America. It was quite a backset to him in his profession to leave his studies at that time, but he listened to the call of duty and returned at once. He was received coldly by his father, who had not forgiven him for thwarting his wishes to take up a business career with a view to becoming his successor. Nevertheless, Charles was his favorite son, and no one doubted that he would inherit his share of his father's estate.

Charles had not been at home a month before Mr. Duffield, after an illness of a few days, died. When the will was opened it was discovered that all the property except the widow's share had been bequeathed to Edward.

The Duffield family seemed doomed to sudden and continued afflictions, for scarcely had the father died and the will read when a cablegram came from Japan announcing the death there of Edward. This put a different complexion on the inheritance. Charles would come in as his brother's heir and thus, after all, a doubly rich man.

Charles wrote Miss Sanger that since she would have inherited his brother's fortune instead of himself as Edward's heir had Edward live to return he proposed to make over Edward's inheritance under the law to her, adding that he (Charles) and his mother would have left sufficient for both. After the elapse of some days he received a note from the lady declining the offer. Surprised, he asked if she would accept half of Edward's share. This she also declined.

Charles was puzzled. He had loved the girl and loved her still, but she had accepted his brother, and he presumed she loved or had loved her fiance. The idea entered Charles' mind that possibly after a sufficient period had elapsed to enable her to recover from her grief she might accept an estate that she should have inherited from Edward by marrying Charles. So he determined to wait awhile.

But the poorest man in the world to wait is one in love. One evening Charles called upon Miss Sanger with the intention of proposing his plan by which she might after all accept the fortune she should have had. Miss Sanger came into the room wearing the serious demeanor of one who had recently been bereaved. Nevertheless there seemed to be an underlying cause for pleasure. Duffield noticed that she held in her hand a long, fat envelope.

He entered upon his proposition stammering. The lady heard him through; then, instead of replying, she handed him the envelope, saying she had received it by mail from Japan that morning. It was a will drawn by his brother leaving all he possessed to her. Since the father had died ten days before the son, the property involved belonged to Ethel Sanger instead of Charles Duffield.

Duffield rose and was about to depart when she called him back and threw her arms around him. It was she who had the right of proposal, so far as fortune was concerned.

"POPULAR DEMAND" OR MONEY—WHICH?

Cost of Roosevelt Boom Exceeds That of Last National Campaign.

The financial backers of Theodore Roosevelt have expended to date nearly $1,000,000 in an endeavor to renominate the former president for a third term. How this money is used and where it comes from are of interest to all citizens.

In Oklahoma the charge has been made that the Roosevelt managers paid $75 a vote to delegates to conventions. This is the state where Mr. Roosevelt said there was a "genuine primary."

The same "crew" has since "worked" Kansas and Nebraska and is now in Arkansas, as witness the following telegram:

Roosevelt managers are using money under the guise of paying wages to workers, another name for bribery.

In Pennsylvania, instead of standing at the polls and handing each Roosevelt voter a five dollar bill, "due bills" were issued calling for this amount which were collected at headquarters when counasigned by the district leaders. It is estimated that $100,000 was expended in this manner. This would "reach" 20,000 voters.

In New York county the Roosevelt managers expended a quarter of a million dollars. One district leader paid $10,000 out of his own pocket in his own district on promise of reimbursement besides what headquarters sent him.

In Chicago two men contributed $7,000 for use in one district on primary day, and $200 was offered eight precinct captains to desert Taft.

Where is the money coming from?

George W. Perkins, director of the International Harvester company and of the United States Steel corporation, neither of which Theodore Roosevelt ever harmed, but, on the contrary, defended as president and defends now, is the "head of the barrel." Frank A. Munsey, a large holder of steel common stock, is a close second. In addition Gifford Pinchot, John F. Bass of New Hampshire, who ran the Roosevelt campaign in North Dakota; Governor Chase Osborne and Truman H. Newberry of Michigan; Chauncey Dewey and Alexander H. Revell of Chicago; Thomas Niedringhaus and Walter Dekey of Missouri and a host of others in the Roosevelt fold are millionaires or multimillionaires. Incidentally Theodore Roosevelt himself has made a million dollars since his return from Africa. He once said "no man could make a million dollars honestly in a lifetime."

LEST WE FORGET!

That Theodore Roosevelt hauled down the tariff revision flag from the White House at the request of Senator Nelson W. Aldrich and Speaker Joseph G. Cannon.

That Theodore Roosevelt once said in a letter, "Can we antagonize the Morgan interests, which have always been so friendly to us?"

That the International Harvester company and the United States Steel corporation are "Morgan interests," that they are represented in the Roosevelt headquarters by George W. Perkins, the chief contributor to the Roosevelt campaign fund, and that Theodore Roosevelt has not mentioned any Morgan interest or friend of Morgan in this campaign except to defend it or him.

That Theodore Roosevelt refused, after he had ordered the suit filed, to permit the prosecution of the International Harvester company and that he reached this decision after a visit from George W. Perkins.

That Modill McCormick of the McCormick family is one of the most active supporters of Theodore Roosevelt.
