For the Children

The Funny Antics of Young Animals at Play.

The author of "Animals at Work and Play" says the faculty of amusement comes early to playful young creatures.

In the zoo the bear cubs tussle with each other, and the polar bears wrestle while standing in their pool three feet deep or try to see how long one can hold another under the water. The graceful but grotesque gnu in performing his antics cuts up the ground of his yard with his sharp hoofs. He runs about his enclosure with great rapidity, turning sharply and digging the earth at each quick turn as he wheels about. Monkeys are, of course, the master players at the zoo. How the ostrich dances about with wings spread and head swinging in a laughable way is shown in the accompanying picture.

There seems to be an inborn desire for active movement in most creatures, and by such motions they get healthful exercise as well as amusement. Advanced thinkers on hygiene tell us that the most recreative exercise for human beings may be had in play. This active movement when mind and muscle are both engaged, brings to both body and mind greater benefit than can be had from any other form of recreation. Nature long ago taught her humbler creatures this, but we have been slow to learn the lesson.—St. Nicholas.

The Game of Buzz.

The old game of buzz has been almost forgotten, but it is well worth recalling because of its fun. The more the players the greater the fun. The way to play it is as follows: The players sit in a circle and begin to count in turn, but when the number 7 or any number in which the figure 7 or any multiple of 7 is reached they say "Buzz." Instead of whatever the number may be. For instance, supposing the players have counted up to 12, the next player will say "13" and the next "Buzz," because 14 is a multiple of 7 (twice 7). The next player would then say "15," and the next "10," and the next would say "Buzz," because the figure 7 occurs in the number 17. If one of the players forgets to say "Buzz" at the proper time he is out. The game then starts over again with the remaining players, and so it continues until there is only one person remaining. If great care is taken the numbers can be counted up to 70, which, according to the rules before mentioned, would be called buzz. The numbers would then be carried on as buzz 1, buzz 2, etc., up to 79, but it is seldom that this stage is reached.

Conundrums.

How does Sarah Bernhardt take her medicine? In cider inside her.
Why is a very plain child a wonderful one? She is an extra-ordinary person.
Why is an orange like a church steeple? Because we have a peel from it.
Why are weary persons like auto wheels? Because they are tired.
In what does a lawyer resemble a woodcock? In the length of his bill.
What word will, if you take away the first letter, make you sick? Music.
Why should a ship's officer never put his chronometer under his pillow? Because he should never sleep upon his watch.

Clothing and Costume.

The words "clothing" and "costume" should not be used as if their meaning were the same. "Clothing" is what is used for protection, and "costume" is the clothing or the garments worn to meet the demands of fashion or of special occasions. In other words, "clothing" is a general term, "costume" a specific one.

Wishes.

Four leaf clover in the grass.
Tell me, do you bring to pass
All the wishes good and true
Little children ask of you?
Do your magic beards hold
Secrets fairies must have told?
I have wishes, one, two, three,
Will you grant them all to me?
First of all I want to know
Where the first spring flowers grow,
"Pilgrim buds" that, pink and shy,
Hide away when I pass by.
My next wish, O clover dear,
Grant to me when summer's here,
Then I want so much to know
Where the berries thickly grow.
My last wish, the best of all,
To go nutting in the fall
And find walnuts crisp and brown
That come gayly tumbling down!
Now my wishes for the year
I have told you, clover dear,
Please to grant them one and all
In the springtime, summer, fall.
