Mrs. Annie Pearl Beale this morning filed a suit in the circuit court in which she asks a decree of divorce from her husband, Christopher Beale. The plaintiff contends that she was married to Beale in Jackson county, on October 16, 1899 and later came to Roseburg to reside. She says her husband treated her in a cruel and inhuman manner and that she was finally compelled to leave him. Other than a decree of divorce the plaintiff asks for the custody of the two minor children born to their union. Mrs. Beale is represented by Attorney R. L. Eddy.

The officers are today searching for Edward J. Bowman who is wanted in Roseburg on a charge of non-support. The warrant of arrest was issued this morning by County Judge Womacott at the instigation of Mrs. Bowman. Mrs. Bowman claims her husband failed to provide those things necessary to sustain life for months and that he finally deserted her and went to Eugene. The Eugene officers were notified today and it is possible that Bowman's arrest will be effected within the next few hours.

INTERESTING ITEMS FROM COLES VALLEY.

Warm Weather Has Good Effect Upon Crop—Social Event Is At The Fortin Home.

The recent warm weather has helped ripen the grain. Most of the hay is in. Quite a few people have begun binding.

Mrs. F. H. Schlegelmilch's sister, of Milwaukee, Wis., is visiting in the valley.

Z. E. Pichette has left for St. Paul, Ore., to make hay on the ranch he recently rented there. His father and family will follow later.

Edna Wilson, of Roseburg, and Flossie Wilson, of Salem, both former residents of the valley, are visiting friends here.

The concrete mixer has arrived at the bridge and work will commence on the piers this week. The people of this valley will certainly be glad to see the last nail driven.

Mr. J. E. P. Withers, of Los Gatos, Cal., and Mrs. A. G. Bogart, of Eugene, are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Emery.

About twenty of the young people gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Fortin Saturday evening to spend the evening with Mr. and Mrs. Seth Clark, formerly of this valley.

They all report a pleasant evening. We understand that a few of our people are train for Jack Johnson.

The Misses Isabelle and Tassie Dearling, of Oakland, spent Sunday afternoon with Margaret Emery.

A very close and interesting game of base ball was played on Cole's Valley's diamond Sunday afternoon between Sutherland and Coles Valley. Up to the fourth inning it was a scoreless game. The ninth inning ended a tie, the score being 5 to 5. The tenth ended a tie also. The eleventh inning opened with Cole's Valley's pitcher almost prostrated with heat and work of the game. Sutherland succeeded in running in six tallies this inning, making the score 11 to 5 in favor of Sutherland. Chas. Aldrich and Chas. Davison starred for Cole's Valley, while Keith and Ralston starred for Sutherland. Coles Valley was badly handicapped by their third baseman being out of the game for the day.

The line up follows:

Coles Valley	Sutherland
Smith	Richmond
Bacon	Nelson
Ellison	Saunerman
Aldrich	Taylor
Edwards	Shuck
Davison	Hornor
Panken	Richmond
Fortin	Ralston
Krohn	Keith

A Mountain Elopement

By HELEN HARWOOD

There are no mountains in the world about which there is so much in song and story as the Alps. Doubtless the reason for this is that they lie in the center of Europe and no one can go from France or Germany down into Italy or farther eastward to Austria without passing over them.

Years ago, before the Alps had come to contain fashionable resorts, there lived at Como, on their southern slope, a gentleman who, having made a fortune in Milan, retired to spend his days in peace on the beautiful Lake Como. He was a widower with one daughter, a charming girl, upon whom he doted. Italians have always arranged the marriages for their sons and daughters, and Signor Atanasio betrothed his daughter, Theresa, to a man more than double her age. Knowing that at his death she would need a protector and considering Signor Rizzuto a man of business who would take care of her property for her, he considered that he had done a very good thing for his child.

But, unfortunately for his plan, he died before the marriage could be brought about. After the funeral Rizzuto claimed his bride, who was also his ward, but found, to his disappointment, that she had a lover in the person of Giovanni Fabroni. Rizzuto was not minded to give her up to his young rival and so informed her. Having certain powers over her as her guardian, Theresa and her lover saw that if she refused to marry the man to whom her father had given her he might put her in confinement and persecute her till she consented to be his wife.

The lovers therefore decided to go away together. Southward, eastward and westward lay Italian territory in which the guardian could invoke the law. Northward was Switzerland, in which he would have no claim upon her. But to go northward meant to cross the Alps, and that at that time was a difficult and dangerous feat to accomplish. Nevertheless, taking the horses and carriage that had belonged to Signor Atanasio, Giuseppe, the coachman, and Elena, the mistress-maid, both of whom would give their lives for their mistress, they started to go as far as wheels would take them and then endeavor, if they could not find sledges, to pursue their journey on foot.

They set out after they were supposed to be in bed, and Rizzuto did not learn of their departure till morning being a very energetic man and spurred to the probable loss of his ward's fortune, he started in pursuit, having learned the direction the fugitives had taken. It was in the latter part of May, and he knew that this being the season of melting snow, was the most dangerous period in the Alps. Moreover, he did not believe that the lovers could go very far in a carriage or that they could secure any further conveyances. Besides, it would be an easy matter to track them by the marks they would leave in the snow.

The lovers reached Locarno, a village on Lake Maggiore, then drove over a gently rising road to the foot of the St. Gotthard pass. On this road they traveled all day and in the evening left it for concealment in a Swiss cabin. Early in the morning they started to go over the pass, leaving the carriage, but taking the horses, on one of which Theresa rode, while the maid rode the other, the men walking. After making a part of the ascent they saw the guardian's carriage coming rapidly up the valley through which they had passed.

They tolled on as rapidly as possible till they came to a point where they were screened from below and where there was a pocket in the mountains. The wind had driven the snow from here, enabling Giovanni to practice a stratagem. He sent the coachman and the maid with the horses on through the pass, while he and Theresa turned into the pocket, which led into the pass again farther on. Rizzuto, reaching this diverging point, hesitated, then went on through the pass taking up the tracks left by the coach man and the maid.

It was several hours after this that Giovanni and Theresa reached an eminence where they could look over a narrow gorge upon the road on the other side. On this road they saw Rizzuto's carriage. He saw them and called on his driver to stop and, getting out of the carriage, called over to the fugitives to give themselves up since they could not escape him.

He was on a road that had been cut through the side of a mountain, which extended above him thousands of feet. It was one of those balmy days in spring when the air is laden with moisture, though the sun shines bright and warm—just such a day as Alpine dwellers fear the avalanche. Though Rizzuto was half a mile distant from the fugitives, his voice sounded as if he were close to them. Just as he pronounced the words "can't escape me," Giovanni and Theresa saw the whole side of the mountain opposite seem to slide slowly downward. It gathered rapidly as it sank, and in a few moments they saw it pass over Rizzuto and his party, burying them a hundred feet deep. The snow had been so evenly balanced that it required only the sound of a voice to vibrate the air sufficiently to bring it down.

The lovers retraced their steps and were married at the bride's home.

... ANNOUNCEMENT ...

Reprinted from Dry Goods Economist, June 22, 1912
 It is but the statement of simple fact to say that the corset buyer who has the opportunity to buy GOSSARD CORSETS and does not take full advantage of the splendid offerings for Fall, falls in the duty to employer and public which that buyer desires to serve.
 It should be remembered that all merchants are not privileged to buy GOSSARD CORSETS, which further emphasizes the responsibility of those entrusted with their distribution.
 Figure imperfections which have developed only recently by wearing corsets of injudicious selection have been accurately anticipated and provided for with that unerring decision and nicety of execution for which the Gossard organization is so eminently qualified.
 Those who sell GOSSARD CORSETS this coming Fall will be months in advance of competition. The samples tell the whole story.
