How to Amuse Children.
It is often difficult to know how to entertain children, as the little ones so soon tire of the games they already know and new games are not easy to find. Here is one called "bachelor's kitchen," which has all the charm of a novelty.

The players sit in a row, all but one, who goes to each of the others and asks what he will give to the bachelor's kitchen. Each answers what he pleases, but no two must mention the same article. Then the questioner goes back to the first child and asks all sorts of questions, which must be answered by the name of the article he has given and by no other word.

We will suppose that one of the children gave a box of matches to the bachelor's kitchen. The questioner asks, "What did you have for breakfast?" "A box of matches." "What do you wear on your head?" "A box of matches." "What kind of a house do you live in?" "A box of matches." The object is to make the answerer laugh, and he is asked a number of questions until he does laugh or is given up as a hard subject. Those who laugh or add another word to their answer must pay a forfeit.

Tricks are always entertaining to children, and an amusing quarter of an hour may be spent with these two new tricks with eggs:

Take a raw egg and empty it by means of pinholes. As soon as the inside of it is dry fill it a quarter full of fine sand and then with a little white wax seal up the holes.

Now, when you want to entertain and mystify your little guests announce that your egg is ready to obey your slightest word. It will stand on the edge of a knife or the rim of a glass, no matter whether you put it sideways or endways. Occasionally tap the imitation egg gently so as to cause the sand to settle each time at the bottom, and thus you will get it to assume any position you wish. Of course the children will not know the egg is not good.

Honey For the Children.
A woman who confesses that she possesses an exceptionally sweet tooth makes a plea for the frequent inclusion of honey in the dietary of the little folks of the household.

"Children do so love anything very sticky," she says. "I believe that is partly why children love honey. And what is better for them? Why not give them plenty of white clover honey? Most countries make far more use of honey than we do in America. It is most wholesome and can be used in many ways."

Honey and ginger cake and buns are delicious, also honey in puddings instead of lemon and marmalade. Then honey with plain sweet puddings or plain corn cakes is delicious. Apples merely baked, the core taken out, filled with honey and cream, the top replaced and put back in the oven for ten minutes, are very good. A little honey with stewed figs or prunes is excellent. For children honey may be eaten with fish. Just boil or broil out or halibut and serve a little honey and milk sauce with it. They will like it much better than parsley sauce. Then spread slices of sponge cake with honey, pile them up and pour a suitable milk sauce over. This makes a nice Sunday pudding. Some children like honey with their cereal, but sirup perhaps is better if they will eat it. Very good taffy can be made with honey and sirup.

Play Clothes For Children.

Dutch play clothes are the privilege of smart children, but the pretty garments which are shown in a number of big shops can be reproduced at home for half of the store cost—that is, as far as the imported article is concerned, for there are some domestic imitations which are quite cheap. The novelties include frocks, aprons, bonnets and coarse stockings, with which are worn the usual leather sandals. Everything is Dutch in effect, substantial and amusing, and the sizes of the various articles are two to six years of age, says Mary Dean.

Little frocks of striped drill, tan linen or white drill trimmed with a border showing designs of Dutch children can be had as low as 65 cents. If the dress is bandied with embroidery it will cost from $1.25 to $1.50. In style the frocks are much like the square-necked aprons, or else they are in the form of high, long sleeved smocks with front pockets made of contrasting material. The aprons are square or round necked, with the armhole cut deep and the gay bordering used only about the neck, armholes and pockets as also all around. The same drills, twines and muslins are used for them as for the frocks, but of course they are only used to protect the usual nice little gown, as wear a Dutch dress they would be superfluous. A number of the bonnets, which are short at the back and show turnback front daps, are of the same texture as the frocks and aprons. Others are of coarse white linen. The headgear naturally is only used outdoors, and it is more suitable for very small children than for older ones.

Better Than a Trade.
"He is founding a new religion."
"Has he got a great idea?"
"You bet he has."
"What is it?"
"That there are easier ways of getting a living than working for it."
