

A GOOD MAN NEVER KNOCKS HIS HOME TOWN.
Roseburg Man Says a Public Park is a Necessity For The Good of Children.

Editor News: Abraham Lincoln said "I like to see a man proud of the place in which he lives." A man who is proud of the place in which he lives is generally a pretty good citizen and his pride is shown in many ways. You never hear the man who is proud of Roseburg knock it and its institutions. He may admit that in some respects that it can be better, but when he does have a complaint to make, he makes it at home, and not in the presence of strangers. The man who is proud of Roseburg believes in well lighted, well paved streets, and shows his belief by encouraging pavement, building good side walks and keeping in an attractive condition his lawn and street parkings. He ought to be in favor of public parks, public library and everything else that tends to better the moral, educational and health conditions of the community. Some men flatter themselves that they are good citizens because they are eternally fighting the liquor traffic in the community, but in some cases this seems to be the extent of "good" they are. Prevention is better than cure. Public parks and playgrounds and manual training will do more for the young in providing them with healthful bodies and thoughts together with a practical education and means of livelihood than all the propaganda against the liquor traffic that can be assembled. The average "reformer" proposes as a remedy for existing evils the tearing down and destruction of some institution that has been created by our social system, but as a rule offers nothing in its place. He will rejoice greatly when victory perches on the banner of the "anti" forces, but seldom starts a movement for the creation of attractive places and common sense methods for the young men and women of the land, by which they can hope for a reasonable amount of pleasure, and prepare themselves for life's battles.

If "prevention is better than cure" why do not some of our well-to-do citizens here encourage the establishment of a public park, a playground (for a dozen of them), a public library, a Y. M. C. A., and a few other constructive things, especially being in a favor of manual training and domestic science in the schools? Why not teach our children to become competent and useful members of society. Instead of giving them a smattering of education that is absolutely ridiculous when measured against the needs of a life's work? Why condemn the young man or woman for going to questionable places of amusement when no other kind is offered? What Roseburg needs at this time is some real reformers, men who will set aside the antiquated methods that have been followed along educational and some other lines for years, and establish a constructive period in Roseburg's history. Instead of devoting all our progressiveness toward paving streets let us broaden out a little, and include in the forward movement the things which are general in progressive cities—let us devote some time and thought and money to constructive things instead of waste so much in destructive attempts. At least let us do a part of the duty we owe our children and have a few public playgrounds, and manual training and domestic science in the schools.
