Nearly 200 Aviators Hurled To Death In Last Four Years

LONGSTAFF, MISS QUIMBY, PARMALEE.

ROCKWELL, HOXSEY, BADGER.

Photos by American Press Association.

DURING the last four years of aviation almost 200 lives have been sacrificed, not counting many who were killed while innocent spectators. With the recent death of M. Kondo, a Japanese aviator, at Corning, N. Y., and of Ernst Alig and his mechanic at Johannisthal, Germany, the total number of aviators killed is 197. In September, eighteen men were killed, the largest number in a single month. At the present writing, in October, five have lost their lives, and if this rate is maintained the figures of last month will probably be exceeded. Each year has seen an increase in the number of fatalities. In 1908 one man was killed, in 1909 four, in 1910 thirty-six, in 1911 seventy-three, while for the nine months of the present year eighty-three have perished. Some of the tragic deaths in America include those of Miss Harriet Quimby, Longstaff, Parmalee, Rockwell, Hoxsey and Badger. But the long list of deaths has not deterred the progress of aviation. Indeed, they have been but tragic incidents which have apparently spurred other demons of the air to more reckless daring.

CHEERY HOMES

It doesn't take many pieces of furniture to make a room look comfortable and homelike and even if there is a piece or so less and the furniture is good, the room won't look bare, but no matter how much trash you put into a room you don't get the true home effect. Trash in furniture is conspicuous, may be it doesn't look that way in the catalogue, but you will always find it that way when you get it home and in the room where you intend putting it. This is not true with good furniture, which really fills more than the space it occupies. Now the difference between trash and good furniture is apparent to us before it goes into any home. We know the difference and buy our goods accordingly and that's the reason you can't buy trash from us.
