A DOUBLE MISTAKE

By ARTHUR W. BREWSTER

Happy the man in whose daily avocation there is no risk. When I was a young man I went to work for a wholesale drug firm. One day a retailer wrote from a neighboring town that our concern had sold him a drug that made every one sick who took any of it. It turned out that I had put up the package sold.

I never entirely got over the narrow escape I had had in this case. I received only the usual reprimand from my employers, for no one can perfectly rely on accuracy always. Later I set up for myself as a retailer of drugs. Though our system was perfect, we had some narrow escapes from committing unintentional murder. When any of my clerks made a mistake I impressed upon him the importance of being careful, but I could not in my heart blame them.

There are occasions where a person who is perfectly methodical, adheres to a system, exercises every care and yet will do something that he can never afterward understand why he did it. Then there are occasions when it is impossible to fix the mind on one's work. One day not long after I had set up for myself a young lady came into the store and asked for some harmless medicine. At the same time a man asked for a poison with which to kill bugs. The young lady happened to be one who impressed me. I couldn't keep my eyes off her. Before the two different packages were ready other persons came in, and I did one of those things I should not have done. Instead of paying no attention to newcomers till after serving those present I undertook to serve all of them. What was the result? When the young lady who had called for a simple remedy and the man who wished a bug poison had gone a horrible suspicion came into my head that I had given the poison to the young girl. I could not warn her, for I didn't know who she was.

Why had I broken my rule about serving a number of persons at once? I couldn't answer the question except for the reason that I had been very much struck with the young lady. Indeed, I had looked at her so admiringly that I had noticed a faint flush come into her cheek. But the fearful consequences of her or any one else taking the dose of the bug poison for the medicine she had called for would surely result fatally.

A crisis hung over my head which, till it had passed, would keep me in a frightful suspense. As soon as the calamity occurred, if I had made the error I feared I had made, the medicine I had sold would be examined, my name would be on the package and I would soon hear of the trouble. The best that could be said for my comfort was that I would not likely be tried for murder, because I had no motive for poisoning any one. But I would carry to my grave the knowledge that I had through carelessness caused the death of the person to whom I had sold it, for I remembered she asked me, "How often shall I take it?" Furthermore, my business would be ruined and I would not have the heart to go elsewhere and make another start. I made two resolutions in case the trouble fell upon me—first, I would never again start in the drug business; second, I would commit suicide.

Every morning and every evening I took up a newspaper with fear and trembling. When a week had passed I felt that the danger was somewhat lessened. But had the young lady died from the effect of poison would those about her surely attribute her death to that cause? This gave me a feeling similar to that of one who may expect at any moment to drop down from heart disease, apoplexy or some other fatal disease.

I am one of those persons whose active, imaginative minds may influence their bodies. I became morbid, then ill, simply from suspense. I took a partner into my business and absented myself from it most of the time. A physician told me that I was going into a decline. But I knew well enough that if I could be assured that I had not killed any one I would be well enough. Finally it occurred to me that if the young lady had not suffered the consequences of my possible error she would likely have visited my store again.

One day I was wandering aimlessly through an unfrequented street tortured by my troubles when, turning a corner, I came face to face with the girl whose fate was driving me into melancholia. There she was, tripping along as healthy, as rosy, as fresh as life. Beside myself with joy, I made one bound, caught her in my arms and covered her face with kisses.

When I realized what I had done I was stricken with a fresh terror lest she have me arrested for assault. Instead, when I released her she smiled at me through her blushes and said, "I knew how you felt toward me the day I went into your store for a prescription."

"You knew that I?"
"Of course. You didn't say it, but you looked it."
"And why have you never come again?"
"Do you suppose I'd do that? Not I. It was for you to seek me, not me you."

"We have been married a long while, but to this day she doesn't know why I was so joyful at meeting her again I wouldn't dare tell her."

Changed Them Around.
"She sings all the popular songs of the day."
"Popular?"
"That is what I said."
"Not when she sings them."

"HAIR THAT GIVES FATHER TIME THE LAUGH"

We are just about as old as we LOOK. People judge us, by the way we LOOK. The man or woman with grey hair is beginning to get in the "Old Timer's Class." This Twentieth Century does NOT want GREY hairs—it wants the energy of Youth. The big things are being done by the YOUNGER generation.

There's a sort of "Has Been" look about those "Grey Hairs." There is always one to criticize and smile scornfully. Father Time is a stern disciplinarian. Get the best of him. Give him the laugh. Do not be a "Has Been." It's unnecessary. Use HAY'S HAIR HEALTH
