FARREN IS KILLED.

A telegram was received in Roseburg this morning to the effect that H. N. Farren, vice-president of the Oregon & Southern Railroad Company, which at one time established headquarters in Roseburg, was instantly killed as the result of a boiler explosion in a mill near Clear Lake, Wash., early yesterday. Upon leaving Roseburg several months ago Farren went direct to the state of Washington where he secured employment as an engineer in a sawmill. There he was employed until yesterday when the boiler exploded and killed him instantly. Mr. Farren was quite well known in Roseburg where he lived for six or eight months. He was the vice-president of the Oregon & Southern Railroad Company, which had for its chief object the construction of a railroad from Medford to Roseburg and thence to the coast. During his residence in Roseburg Mr. and Mrs. Farren resided at the home of Mrs. Calland, who conducts a rooming and boarding house on Brockway street.

BURLY NEGRO ORDERS HIM TO LEAVE HIS OWN HOME.

"Zero" Davis Comes to Roseburg and Causes Warrant to be Issued For Whitmore Resident.

Declaring that he was ordered from his own abode by a burly negro named Irwin Rhoades, and that he was compelled to seek shelter at the home of a neighbor, Zean, or "Zero" Davis, as he was dubbed by the attorneys during a recent trial in the circuit court, arrived in Roseburg last evening from his home at Whitmore, a small station midway between Sutherlin and Oakland, and caused a warrant to be issued charging Rhoades with the simple crime of trespass.

According to the story told by Davis last night Rhoades has been in charge of a brickyard at Whitmore for some time past, and of late has been boarding at the Davis home. Davis says he suspected that Rhoades was intimate with his wife for some time past, but not until Thursday when he detected them sitting on a lounge did he decide to have his boarder arrested. In telling the officers of the affair, Davis said he entered his home unbeknownst to Rhoades and his wife and was greatly surprised to find them sitting on the lounge with Rhoades' arm about his wife's waist. "I protested," said Davis between sobs last evening, "but without avail. Why that burly negro even ordered me from my own home, while my wife told me it was time to heat it. Rather than engage in a fight with the intruder I left and here I am in search of a warrant."

Davis told his story to the district attorney last night, and upon recommendation of the latter a warrant was issued by Justice Marsters charging Rhoades with the simple crime of trespass. The warrant was sent to Sutherlin later in the evening, and Deputy Sheriff Eddy arrived here with the prisoner this morning. Inasmuch as the district attorney was unusually busy this afternoon the preliminary hearing has been postponed until tonight at 7:30 o'clock. Rhoades is a colored gentleman and appears to possess ordinary intelligence. At least, he talks fluently and denies emphatically that he took undue liberties with Mrs. Davis. He admits boarding at the Davis home and to this fact he attributes his present difficulty. Rhoades says Davis is of a jealous disposition, and secured the warrant of arrest without proper investigation.

It is said that District Attorney George M. Brown already has evidence in his possession which warrants the filing of a charge against Rhoades much more serious than the one upon which he was taken in custody last evening.

Davis is well known in Roseburg, and at one time played the role of a detective in this vicinity. He made a specialty of liquor violations and was responsible for the arrest and conviction of a number of local bootleggers. Of late, he has worked on the section between Sutherlin and Oakland. Other than a wife he has three small children.
