RIGHT FROM THE SHOULDER.

The editor of the Marshfield Record does not mind words in a recent scathing article dealing with the disappearance of money that was raised in a small town nearby and which act caused the aged mayor of that place to brood so strongly over the matter that he took his own life. The Record calls a spade a spade, and act an implement of agriculture, when it says, "there are walking the streets of this city today two poker playing leeches who know who took this money." It accuses them in connection with the actual thief of the moral guilt of murder in causing an aged honored man to so grieve over what might be construed as his carelessness to such an extent that he could no longer live under the strain. Without actually mentioning names, the paper went as far as it could to point out not only the real, but the accessories to the theft, and demanded that immediate steps be taken for their arrest. It is fearlessness of this nature in exposing crime and graft in one's own community, no matter where or who it affects, that gives a newspaper a power for good when launched with such vehemence and force as was this article, at evils and winked at crimes that are local and stalking in our very midst.

THIS WEEK IN MEXICO.

The beginning of another week given but little hope for the solution of the Mexican riddle or puzzle, and according to the best information that comes from the official headquarters of news on this situation, but little credence can be given to much that has been published. There has evidently been a great deal of guess work and speculation as to what actually has been said and done. One fact appears to be recognized and that is there has not been any positive information given Huerta nor has there been any denial of this government by him as commonly reported. Neither has any open policy of recognition to any clan or faction been made. This can be accepted as positive as also the assurance that the president has no intention of turning over the negotiations to congress this week. Mexican cartoonists seem to be the ones who are stirring up the passions and prejudice of that people against this country and the thorn of the trouble is in the inflamed journals that may or may not have their articles inspired from official sources.

DIXIE QUINTETTE

ANTLERS THEATRE ONE NIGHT ONLY

PARTS WHICH THEY PLAYED IN THE DIXIE CHORUS. Those who saw the Dixie Chorus in their recent tour of the present Dixie Quintette as the impersonators of the character "Mandy," both in the prelude entitled "Sensations of the Negro" and in the "Role of the Negro". Mr. Johnson of this quintette is the man who took the part of "Uncle Remus" in the Dixie Chorus. Mr. Turner impersonated "Old Black Joe" in the "Epic of the Negro" and Mr. Goodbar took the Jewish comedy part in the "Cotton-Gold Sketch". In fact the four first named comprised the vocal quartette which appeared throughout the Dixie Chorus renditions. Four of this company have been upon the platform for years, having been with the older jubilee quartettes prior to going with the Dixies.
