PLAN TO RAISE RATES.

Modern Woodmen Laymen Opposed to High Insurance.

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., Dec. 3.—The final desperate battle between the head camp officers and the ranking members of the Modern Woodmen of America over the question of an increase in the rates of insurance in the order, which during the past two years has been marked as the bitterest struggle in the history of fraternal orders in America, will be fought out in the seventeenth triennial meeting of the order at Toledo, O., June 16, 1914, according to an announcement of the executive council from the head camp officers here today. The council having set the date, is today making preparations for the biggest meeting in the history of the order. Fully 17,000 members will attend, drawn by the struggle which they claim involves the very life of the organization.

The rate question was first raised in its present form at the triennial meeting at Buffalo in 1911. Action was postponed until the winter, when a special meeting of the head camp was held in Chicago, and a readjustment of rates voted. All the rates are higher than those hitherto prevailing, and those for the older members of the order are three to five times higher. Throughout the country, and especially in the state of Illinois, Iowa, Kansas and Missouri, the rates were strongly resisted. Several test cases were brought in circuit courts, resulting in injunctions against enforcement of the new rates on the ground that they were not imperative to the financial safety of the order, that since the benefits of the organization are mutual and reciprocal, the rates cannot be enforced without the consent of the majority of the membership.

The head camp in the summer of 1913 proposed a referendum, submitting seven different rate plans for the selection of the membership. But the impression gained currency that the referendum was a ruse, and the result was a vote of less than one per cent of the members. The executive council had been expected to take some action on the question at its meeting here, but deferred it to the triennial convention. Opponents of the plan declare the whole proposal was a move to transform the insurance plan of the order from fraternal to "old line." They contend that the question will never be settled until this movement has been downed, and that this can be done only by removing the present head camp officers and selecting others who represent the views of the membership. This they will attempt to do at the Toledo meeting.

Though the city of Toledo will be filled with the Woodmen, the voting delegation will not be large. Five hundred and fifty members of the local camp clerks' association and delegates from the Forrester make up the convention proper. Second in importance to the executive sessions of the delegates will be the Forrester drills, which head camp officials here estimate will include five thousand unformed men. Those composed of drill squads of sixteen to twenty men from each camp, will live in a tented city and maintain military discipline. Before Toledo was awarded the meeting she was required to enter obligations to furnish a large parking place for the camp.

Six thousand dollars are to be given as prizes to the winning team in the drill. United States officers are to judge the competition. The executive council, which with the Toledo authorities will have charge of the immense assembly, consists of R. W. Parsons, of Ashland, Wis.; John C. Nagle, of Detroit, Mich.; George H. Minneapolis, and A. J. Armstrong of Clinton, Mo.

A CORRECTION.

Looking Glass, Ore., Nov. 30, Evening News, Roseburg.

Mr. Editor—We respectfully wish to correct articles in recent issues of the News relating to the arrest of certain parties. In the articles you refer to seven Looking Glass young men, when in fact only one of the seven resides in Looking Glass. The others residing in Ten Mile, Brockway and Florence. The mere fact that these indecent and immoral acts were committed in Looking Glass is humiliating enough without having it understood that the guilty parties reside here.

We wish to add that although a rough-neck fraternity of violators of law and order have had practically their own way here for some time past it is not the intention of the good citizens of this community to commit or tolerate such acts of violators of the statute which one man owes to another, and those committing such acts must expect to pay the penalty. Respectfully,
W. H. Dale, as a Citizen.

From Greenland to Copenhagen

The Ovation at Copenhagen

"The anxiety of the newspaper correspondents on board gave me the idea that my story might have considerable financial value. I was certainly in need of money. I had only forty or fifty dollars and I needed clothing and money for my passage from Copenhagen to New York.

"I prepared a story of about 2,000 words, and went ashore at Lerwick. No one but myself and a representative of the captain were allowed to land. We swore the cable operator to secrecy, sent several official and private messages, and one to James Gordon Bennett briefly telling of my discovery. As the operator refused to be responsible for the press message, it was left with the Danish Consul. To Mr. Bennett I cabled: 'Message left in care of Danish Consul, 2,000 words. For it $3,000 expected. If you want it, send for it.'

"At Elsinore many people came aboard with whom I shook hands and muttered in- anities in response to congratulations. Reporters who were not seasick thronged the ship, each one insisting on a special interview. Why should I be interviewed? It seemed silly to make such a fuss.

"Cablegrams and letters piled in my cabin. With my usual methodical desire to read and answer all communications, I sat down to this task, which soon seemed hopeless. I was becoming intensely puzzled, and a not-knowing-where-I-was-at sensation confused me. I did not have a minute for reflection, and before I could approximate my situation, we arrived at Copenhagen.

"Like a bolt from the blue, there burst about me the clamor of Copenhagen's ovation. I was utterly bewildered by it. I found no reason in my mind for it. About the North Pole I had never felt such exultation. I could not bring myself to feel what all this indicated, that I had accomplished anything extraordinarily marvelous. For days I could not grasp the reason for the world-excitement.
