

"THE LOST INHERITANCE"

Story of Ruth Told By Rev. H. Wyse Jones Last night.

"The Lost Inheritance" was the subject of the sermon at the Baptist church last night, and in the address Rev. H. Wyse Jones told the story of Ruth, and other incidents of life and literature to illustrate his theme. He spoke feelingly, not only of the belief that Christ can give to man eternal life, but of the good he can do them in this world. He told how useless it is to spend one's talents in dissipation, in vice, and in things which help no human person. In some ways the sermon was perhaps the greatest the minister has preached up to this time. While he dwelled less on the value of eternal life to a man, he considered the side of Christ's teaching which directs men to be altruistic and brotherly principles. This is one side that is altogether too much neglected by ministers, for the records of Christ in the Bible spend three-fourths of their accounts on man's duty to man, and less than one-fourth to the things of the hereafter.

GOES TO TRIAL

Father Hans Schmidt is Accused of Murder.

MOST SENSATIONAL CASE PROMISED

Man Who Killed Anna Ammueler and Buried Her Dismembered Body in River Faces Serious Charge in Courts.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—After several postponements, the Rev. Father Hans Schmidt, Roman Catholic priest who confessed to murdering Anna Ammueler today went to trial before Judge Warren W. Foster. Father Schmidt's crime was one of the most sensational in New York criminal history. Only by clever detective work was Detective Inspector Faurot able to arrest Schmidt in the parish home of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic church, where he was an assistant priest. A woman's torso was found tied in a pillow slip on the Jersey side of the Hudson on September 5. A faint leaf-shaped mark on one shoulder afforded scant clue that the victim's identity ever would be ascertained. A few days later the lower part of the torso from the waist to the thighs was found in a similar pillow slip, which bore the trade mark of Robinson-Rogers Co., and the number 89. The company had made but twelve of those pillow slips. They had been sold to a retailer named Sachs, who furnished the police with the names of those to whom he had sold them. One of the purchasers was found to have bought also two pillows, a chair, bed-springs and a white enameled bed, which has been moved to a four-room apartment at 68 Bradhurst avenue, which had been leased in the name of Hans Schmidt. In the meantime an autopsy had showed the woman had been subjected to a criminal operation, and the motive of the crime was thereby known. For five days and nights the Bradhurst avenue apartment was watched and then the police broke into it.

There was no doubt the crime had been committed there, for the place was smeared with blood. Besides the furniture were a packet of letters addressed to Anna Ammueler and two trunks. A coat hung in the closet with a letter to Anna Ammueler, and a photograph of Hans Schmidt in the pocket. In the bathroom were a butcher knife and a large carpenter's saw. In the letters were contained the addresses of three places where the girl had worked. One of these was St. Joseph's rectory. The police went to the other places first. Father Schmidt met them at the door of the last place. He attempted suicide, and then confessed. He said he killed the girl on the night of September 2, returned to his priestly duties and the next night carried one portion of the body to the river. The next day he gave parishioners a confession and the next night took another part of the body to the river. This was continued until the body was disposed of. Then he carried the bed-clothing to a nearby lot and burned them. All his confessions were corroborated and the priest declared he had been commanded by God to consummate his "love sacrifice in blood." At his first hearing he threw his rosary in the face of his attorney. His defense, according to his attorneys, will be insanity. The terrible feature of the murder was that the girl was cut to pieces while she was still alive.
