UNEMPLOYED ON THE MARCH.

Small Army Footing It Toward Southern Oregon.

OREGON CITY, Or., Jan. 8.—An army of 125 unemployed men from Portland are being housed and fed tonight at the expense of Oregon City. Marching into the city, they sent an advance agent to Mayor Jones to determine the attitude that he would take on their arrival.

The mayor announced he would allow them to sleep in the armory and give them food tonight and tomorrow morning and send them on their way to Salem. The ladies declared today that they planned to go through the state from one town to the other, asking for work.

The leaders said they had no money. The mayor instructed the chief of police to furnish them with plenty to eat tonight and in the morning, on condition that they leave the city at once. He also granted them the right to speak on the streets tonight, provided every man was accounted for by the leaders. A guard will be placed at the armory to hold them in the building after the meeting is over.

Unless they find work before they get to Salem they propose to present the matter to Governor West and ask him for relief.

SOCIALISTS CAPTURE WASHINGTON TOWN.

Now "Keep Your Eye On Pasco" Say The New Officials.

PASCO, Wash., Jan. 8.—The new city administration was inaugurated last night before a crowd that packed the city hall. Four socialist councilmen and a socialistic mayor were sworn in. A. L. Johnson, mayor, has the distinction of being the first socialist elected as a city executive in Washington. His election culminated one of the hardest-fought campaigns the city ever has seen. Many voters from other parties rallied to support of the socialists.

The old council met and completed some unfinished business, after which it adjourned.

Mayor Sylvester before leaving the mayor's chair made a speech, in which he reviewed the progressive measures enacted during his two terms.

He bitterly attacked his opponents and swore that he had not been implicated in any of the graft which has been charged to his administration by local newspapers. He demanded that the new city administration investigate his acts. When he addressed direct remarks to W. W. Liggett, editor of the Pasco Progress, Mr. Liggett arose to make a statement, but the mayor called him to order.

Walter H. Stevens, a local locomotive engineer, was appointed chief of police.

GOVERNOR WEST REMAINS QUIET FOR DAY, ACCORDING TO TODAY'S REPORTS

Sheriff Ed Rand and Governor West Reach an Agreement Relative to Procedure.

BAKER, Or., Jan. 8.—Lieutenant Colonel J. K. Lawson, of the Oregon Militia, having failed in his mission to Copperfield to obtain the resignations of the city officials there, is in Baker today and in conference with Sheriff Rand regarding the situation, but as yet no definite agreement as to how the situation shall be handled has been reached.

Sheriff Rand said today that he had not accepted the governor's proposal to withdraw the militia from Baker county on condition that he appoint Frank H. Snodgrass special deputy sheriff, and he said he did not know whether he would accept the proposal, intimating that he would take no further steps but would let the governor act next. It is likely he will send a verbal message to Governor West through Colonel Lawson.

As the situation now stands martial law still exists in Copperfield and three militiamen are there under Sergeant Renard, while Sheriff Rand has appointed H. H. Fisher special deputy sheriff to serve whatever papers may be served there.

Governor West has maintained silence for one day and has sent no further communications either to Mr. Rand or to District Attorney Godwin.

All the militiamen, save the four who have been left at Copperfield and Colonel Lawson, have returned to Portland. In Baker, awaiting developments, however, are John Abbott and Frank H. Snodgrass, attaches of the Oregon state penitentiary, who have been assisting Governor West in his crusade in Baker county.

Interest now centers in the legal battle which will be waged in Baker Saturday. On the outcome of this case depends, it is believed, the entire situation. Circuit Judge Anderson will be called on to decide whether or not the militia was acting within its province in closing the saloons at Copperfield, and in seizing the liquor and saloon fixtures. On this decision it is thought will rest any action for damages which may be brought by the saloon men in the case.

Whether Governor West and Miss Hobbs will attend the hearing here in person or by attorney has not been learned here, although both are defendants in the action. It is believed, however, that the governor will be here.

The county court late today was still considering the reports of the road supervisors serving during the year 1913. The work of appointing the new supervisors will be taken up Monday by the court.

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Neely, of Mapleton, Lane county, who have been spending the past few days here visiting with their nephew, Edward Neely, left for Grants Pass this morning.

J. A. Brown, of Myrtle Creek, today filed a suit in the circuit court for divorce against his wife, H. E. Brown. The couple were married in the year 1895, and three children were born to their union. The plaintiff claims that his wife possessed an uncontrollable temper and often accused him of intimacy with other women. She also threatened him with violence according to the complaint. The plaintiff is represented by Attorney George Jones.

The Dinner Hostess.

It is imperative that the dinner hostess be ready and untroubled by haste, a little ahead of the time set for her guests to arrive. If civility counts at all, one's guests are usually on time. It is proper to wait a few moments for the late comers. The rule laid down by a clever hostess in London some years ago was: "To wait dinner five minutes for an earl and countess, ten minutes for a duke and duchess and fifteen minutes for the Prince and Princess of Wales. The king is never late." Which proves the great of the earth are punctual in keeping their engagements.

It is not kind nor proper to spoil a good dinner for many guests because of the late arrivals of the few. It is proper to announce dinner five minutes after the arrival of the last guest—unless we adopt the American fashion of having cocktails served in the drawing room before dinner. Then dinner is announced five minutes after that little ceremony is over. The conservative part of the world of fashion follow the foreign idea and omit the cocktail. The wines are usually very simple—a good white wine and champagne with the dessert and fruit. The men linger over the wines and nuts a very short time today.

The table linen may be as elaborate as the pocketbook permits. Yet the dictates of good form point to the less trimmed cloth, a fine damask or linen hemstitched with napkins to match. The napkins are large and square, with the initials embroidered in the center, and folded in three parts.

The decorations in glass and silver are less ostentatious. The glassware is now of rock crystal and the tumbler for water—cooled, not iced—has a tall, slender stem, the wine glasses and champagne glass the same shape in miniature.

The display of knives and forks is reduced to a mere nothing today. The old time bewildering glitter was too formidable—it spoiled our dinner by suggesting "too much for digestion's sake."

The number of plates is also reduced. A guest should never be without a plate before him. "The little aperitif" is on a small plate resting in a larger one, and when removed a dinner plate is at once placed in front of the guest and removed as the plate upon which the soup plate rests is put before the guest. Another plate is substituted for the entire course in the same way. It is very simple, and the only rule is there should not be a vacant place in front of the guest. A plate should always be there.

A little block of bread or "petit pain" is put by the napkin to be used as a convenience in unmanaging wilful tidbits which evade the fork, with a gentle but decided coercion.

Finger bowls of rock crystal, with a little plate to match, and a pretty lace doily under the bowl are brought in with the dessert plates at a home dinner, and with the plates for fruits and hotbreads at a more formal affair. The water in the bowls should be warmed just enough to take the chill off, and a bit of lemon should be added to the water, which should cover the first joint of the fingers.

Good Form in Posing.

Have you ever sat in a restaurant and looked around at the various tables occupied by pretty women and then dropped your eyes to the floor and scrutinized the position of their feet? When a shock awails you, for the average woman assumes the most grotesque of positions when she sits herself down in a chair—or, rather, her feet fall on the weirdest attitudes that any one could imagine. For instance, she may be sitting correctly from the feet upward—the acme of grace as far as the upper part of her body is concerned—but her feet are twisted and arched around the legs of the chair in a way that suggests a contortionist, or if this is not the case perhaps she has placed her pedal extremities on the floor with the toes turned in and she suspects her of being pigeon-toed.

Why is it that so few women can make their feet behave? And why do the many who walk with the greatest amount of grace lose all their charm the minute they sink into a chair? The correct sitting position is not difficult, and any woman can learn to assume it with a little care and practice.

When sitting down, whether at a restaurant table, in an easy chair or in a public place, do not forget that the feet should be placed squarely on the floor, the heels touching or very nearly touching, the knees not too far apart. This position is just as comfortable as any of the grotesque attitudes assumed when crossing the knees, curling the feet around the corners of the chair or any of the hundred and one other ungraceful modes of sitting indulged in by so very many women.

How often have you seen a pretty girl destroy all her grace and charm by stumbling down into a chair? She was quite unconscious of the impression she was creating, and only carelessness was responsible for this awkward pose. And yet many girls are just as careless and just as awkward and willfully destroy all their reputation for grace.
