Yesterday forenoon the delivery wagon belonging to the Douglas County Creamery was held up right on Jackson street and about 150 pounds of butter taken out of the wagon. This incident caused no particular comment from passers by, but when the customer to whom the product was assigned began to telephone to the creamery to learn where their butter was, the proprietors began to be alarmed, and wondered what had happened to the driver of the wagon. At this critical moment the delivery wagon put in an appearance, and the driver explained that Pure Food Inspector Shrock and two other deputies were responsible for the hold up, and that the butter had been taken into Kohlhagen's meat market where it was weighed and tested. The product of the home creamery was found O. K. in every particular, and the Messrs. Chandler & Willett are highly elated over the matter, even though the matter caused some little delay in delivery of orders to customers. Since this butter business has been under inspection here during the past two or three weeks, the local creamery state their business has increased very materially.
