RUFFLES ARE POPULAR

Styles of Broadway Are Most Striking This Year

NEW YORK, March 13.—To be fashionable you must be ruffled up from top to toe. We have been straight-lined and slimsy and sleek so long that once the break was made there has been a mad revolt from the straight and narrow. The consequence is an amazing eruption of ruffles on all the spring frocks and hats.

While most of the ruffles on the gowns catches you on the hip following the approved hippy outline of the tunic, puff and pannier, others begin at the knee and take a crooked and bias path to the waist line. Some of the ruffles have even dared to break into the narrow zone about the ankles and on some of the newest taffeta models they ripple three deep about feet so long bounded only by the straight and narrow, plain and uncompromising hem.

For skirt ruffles, not of hie taffeta, from which the entire gown is built, are the approved materials. For the wrist ruffles and those outlining the low bodices the same materials are the thing, although lace is also popular. The neck frills evolved from the taffeta medium are very chic but not as full as those of the thinner fabrics.

The new suit coats are all cut with a flaring circular ruffle around the bottom when the suit is of serge or the heavier twilled silks. When the suit is of the omnipresent taffeta the coats are finished with ruffles as full and flamboyant as the law allows.

Separate silk wraps of flowered or plain silk are very quaint with kimono tops and deep ruffles two or three deep set on from the yoke line to the finish. The loose sleeves of these wraps end in deep ruffles while an upstanding one finishes the neck.

As for the hats and the small turban shapes almost all boast an upstanding frill of either taffeta or net while the brimmed ones have ruffles of lace, net or taffeta gathered around their crowns and fluffily veiling their brims.

When you have donned a suit whose short jacket is finished with two fitted circular ruffles and whose skirt is just one fitted circular flounce after another then top it off with a tiny turban of hemp with an upstanding frill of black net you certainly present a fashionable but scarcely a calm and unruffled appearance.

Hardly in the hat class but still something that goes to your head is the new tulle halo made up for all fashionable sinners in imitation of saintlier models. It is fashioned of a tulle frill that stands out from the face in the most approved halo fashion.

Since we have taken to halos it is no wonder that the waist line is again striving to lead the higher life. For evening gowns and in fact all dressy occasions the high waist is again de rigueur although the normal line still clings triumphant about your middle for middle day wear.

After the surfeit of wide girdles and sashes galore it is a promised relief from monotony that many Parisian dressmakers and designers are now favoring narrow inch-and-a-half girdles or rather belts and in many instances no girdle at all but simply a line of joining between the blouse and skirt. Of course the girdles will not submit to annihilation without a struggle and so it is putting forth new lures and fascinations to hold its devotees.

Not the least of these charmers is a girdle composed of two or three shades or contrasting colors. In a sweatpale shade of pink is adorable. In three shades of green, yellow or American beauty that these girdles are indeed lovely and it is well to have at least one about you even if the rest of your wardrobe be girderless.

It is sad to relate, but waistlines on sport and top coats absolutely refuse to be elevated like like the rest of their ilk. They have sunk to the lowest depths. Even the belts that hang around them have fallen into their low ways and slump loosely and discouragingly in the rear.
