BROWN FOR ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

The announcement that District Attorney George M. Brown will be a candidate in the coming primary for the nomination for the office of attorney-general of this state recalls a truism which was printed a few days ago in one of the Portland papers. "The ideal public officer is a rare jewel, a treasure to be conserved wherever found," was the language used as a preamble to a sincere appreciation of the man who yesterday formally entered the contest for attorney-general.

George M. Brown is the type of public officer that the people should keep in office for the public good. In his long career as prosecutor in this county and district he has kept faith with the oath and duties of his office. His has been a stewardship which has been big with ideals and strong in character. He has prosecuted crime for the good of the community and not for personal fame or advancement. When the welfare of society could be served, as well through leniency, as a harsh interpretation of the law he has adopted the former and has given the weak, the first offender, the dupe and the young another chance to take a true place in the activities of citizenship.

"Genuine law enforcement and industry," constitute the essence of his platform, and those who know him both as a man and a prosecutor know that these qualities are linked inseparably with his private and public life. His record as prosecutor for more than a decade here guarantees to the people of Oregon, should he be elected attorney-general, that he will not shirk in those qualifications which have played an important part in his retention in office and popular favor term after term and which now commend him to the attention of many people of the state who regard him as an "ideal public officer" whose ability should be "conserved" to the use of the people of the whole state.

George M. Brown is an able, experienced attorney who has a deep appreciation of the significance of the law and who has a logical mind capable of analyzing for the people's good those grave questions which from time to time are brought to the attorney-general for opinion and decision.

The people of the second district recommend, to the people of the state, George M. Brown for attorney-general, knowing that the state will receive an honest, fearless officer whose only master shall be—to quote his own words—"the sovereign state of Oregon."

This city is certainly situated in a most favorable position to allow its inhabitants splendid facilities for outings on such beautiful afternoons as was enjoyed yesterday. One of the favorite walks for those who are not averse to a little strenuous exercise, is the trip to the summit of Mt. Nebo, starting the ascent at the foot of the Lane street bridge thence along the top of the ridge, and descending at the Alexander bridge. This is by far the most scenic and picturesque outing within many miles, and while somewhat strenuous, amply repays one for the effort. Yesterday afternoon the trail up and every out jutting rock, and all the cozy nooks on the way were covered with delighted perspiring climbers, who from the streets below had the appearance of Lilliputians. Another favorite trip was over the new bridge across the Umpqua, and many people crossed from one side to the other on the single plank that fills in the unfinished part of the floor. The magnificent scenery along the Pacific highway to south of the city, with its background of high and towering hills, and the river way below, was also one of the favorite jaunts selected, as were the flower decked tops of reservoir hills. Lovers of nature can certainly find plenty of places in this near vicinity, without having to make long expensive trips to get to them.

Another raid by Mexican bandits on American territory is reported, followed by the killing of an official and the looting of a customs house. After taking a good swig from the grape juice flask, in order to get his nerve in proper condition, our Secretary of State sent out the terrifying order that a strict investigation should be instituted at once. This is American honor once more upheld and vindicated.

Besides giving better results in looks, lasting qualities and satisfaction.

Call for a color card and study carefully the directions for applying and handling paint

Please remember that our confidence in S. W. P. is not simply that which the manufacturers claim, but is that born of handling it so many years with such satisfaction.

But don't overlook the fact that Sherwin Williams began small, and upon QUALITY have built a business that has overflowed into Canada and even to England, and today is one of the BIG BUSINESSES of our country.
