Confession of Dago Frank Proves That the Men Were Guilty of Rosenthal Murder and that System Actually Exists

By Carlton Ten Eyck (Written for the United Press) NEW YORK, April 27—There undoubtedly are a host of folks in America who bemoan the fact that it costs an unheard of amount of money to get the kind of flat they want to live in. Let these folks draw high and harken to what is costing Mrs. John P. Laffin to live in the only kind of flat she would "even consider." Mrs. Laffin is today paying exactly $4,166.66 2/3 per month for what she calls a "modest flat" of thirty-five rooms in New York City.

"Oh, well," some folks will say, "Mrs. Laffin probably has a mint of money, and about twelve children and as many more cousins, aunts, uncles and sisters living with her." Draw near once more, those of you who are paying $20, $50 or $75 a month rental and think you ought to have eight instead of four rooms in your flat, where you and two or three other persons live.

In Mrs. Laffin's family there are herself and daughter. Of course, the household personnel includes about ten men and women servants, for, as Mrs. Laffin explained, she intends to do quite a bit of entertaining at home. Mrs. Laffin is not unusually wealthy as it goes in Little Old New York. She believes, though, that she ought to economize on other things and spend the savings on her place where she spends most of her time.

The thirty-five room apartment includes the entire floor of a big skyscraper apartment house on exclusive West End Avenue. There are eight bath rooms and several specially planned rooms larger even than many drawing rooms and reception rooms in some of Riverside Drive's handsome mansions.

No better illustration of the power of that insidious thing "The System," and of the degenerate, distorted "sense of honor" which holds among New York's gangsters, underworld habitués and social parasites could have been given than that furnished by the so-called confession of Dago Frank Cirioletti, one of the four Rosenthal murderers a few moments before he paid for a life of crime in the electric chair at Sing Sing.

Dago Frank, after a kind of fear of his Maker had been put into his heart by the heroic Sing Sing priest, said he would tell the details of Rosenthal's murder. In his pathetic attempt to show he had no part in the actual shooting he proved two things beyond any question of doubt. That the four men were guilty and that the "System" exists.

Even in admitting that he was the virtual leader of the gunmen, Frank, according to Warden Clancy, did not talk freely, because, as he naively told Clancy, he was fearful that vengeance, sure and pitiless, would be visited on his hapless mother and sisters, by "members of the gang" who survived him.

Within a few minutes of the beyond, Dago Frank, once a leader in that world of individual reprisals and vengeance, forced to tell all. He even went further. He laid the actual killing to Harry Vallen, whom two courts had practically admitted was merely a co-conspirator, obviously to be revenged because Vallen turned state's evidence; and he did his best to clear one who still rests under the stigma of being the head of the conspiracy.

Frank's "confession" held himself and Whitey Lewis guiltless on the charge of murder. He protested that he and Lewis should not be executed, because, although he admittedly made all the arrangements for the murder, he was not at the scene at the time, and therefore fired his shot at Rosenthal. Lewis, Dago Frank contended, pointed his gun at Rosenthal and pulled the trigger, but the cartridge did not explode, therefore according to the Dago Frank way of thinking, and Frank's opinion mirrors the opinion of his ilk, Whitey Lewis was not guilty of murder.

That last minute talk of the doomed gunman, has worked as a flareback to the fight of certain sentimentalsists that perhaps, after all, "those poor boys" were not guilty but were being sacrificed to hot public demand for reprisal. That last minute talk, coupled with the later discovery of a bribery in connection with witnesses who tried to prove that the gunmen should get a new trial has shown that New York punished some of the men who planned and carried into execution the murder of Rosenthal.

TIMBER MODELS

Display Planned For Forest Product Exposition.

GOVERNMENT SALE OF TIMBER INCREASES

In 1913 Contracts for Lumber Were Made Which Total Four and a Half Million Dollars.

Two models which show how the government sells its timber have just been prepared in Washington, for display at the forest products exposition, to be held in Chicago April 29 to May 9 and in New York 26 to 30. These models represent an acre of western yellow pine land in a national forest of the southwest before and after logging.

In the model showing the stand before the lumberman goes into it the trees range from those only a few years old to large, overmature, stag-headed individuals more than ready for the ax. In the second model the mature trees and all others larger than a certain diameter have been cut down and made into logs and cordwood. In this, as in all government sales, the stumps are cut low to avoid unnecessary waste, logs are taken to a small diameter well up into the tree, and such material as is not fit for lumber is converted into cordwood. Together, the models show the care which the government requires of lumbermen in felling old trees so that the young growth is not injured. The brush is piled in heaps for burning after the lumber has been removed, in order that the fire menace which foresters say usually follows lumbering may be done away with. The models are on a scale of about one inch to five feet so that trees approximately 100 feet tall are about 20 inches high in the models.

It is the intention of the forest service to have these models set forth certain points in regard to the timber sales conducted by the government. They will demonstrate in the first place, that the timber on the national forests is for use; placards tell how it is sold to the highest bidder when it is wanted for commercial purposes, and how it may be given to local settlers and prospectors for developing homesteads or mines. The models themselves indicate that the timber is cut in such a way as to eliminate all avoidable waste of wood and to secure a continuance of the forest crop, not only for timber production but for the protection of the soil. They further show the fundamental principles applicable to many logging operations, that the mature and overmature trees should be removed, that starchy growing young trees should be left to produce seed and insure a reproduction of the stand, and that the young growth should be protected from damage in lumbering operations.

The models are supplemented by a graphic chart, which shows by pictured piles of money and by conventional trees of graded size the increase of timber sales on the national forests from 1905 to 1913. Inclusive. In 1905 the timber sold from the national forests aggregated 36,000,000 board feet, which brought the government no more than $55,000. Three years later the amount of timber sold increased to nearly 250,000,000 board feet, and the money received rose to $735,000. In 1911 820,000,000 board feet sold for more than $2,000,000, and in 1913 more than 2,000,000,000 feet brought in contracts amounting to $4,500,000. Not all this money was received in any one year, because national forest timber is sold on contract which range from one to twenty-five years, and it is paid for as cut.
