WORKING FOR COMPLETE REUNION

The Rev. Dr. Henry W. Temple, member of the faculty of Washington and Jefferson University, Pennsylvania, says that, in 1912, he was one of the four million republicans who voted the progressive ticket. In that year Dr. Temple was elected to congress as a progressive, from the 24th Pennsylvania district. In a recent letter to a republican friend, Dr. Temple describes the progressive movement as "not a revolt against republican principles. It was he adds, "in part a protest against certain abuses that had crept into the old organization and in part a movement to add to the older republican principles certain new policies which would bring about better social and industrial conditions."

Continuing, Dr. Temple says: "Many republicans who believe precisely as we believe stayed in the old party and endeavored to correct its abuses and to work such changes as would bring the progressives back to the republican ranks. A large number of the progressives did go back at the election of 1914, because they were dissatisfied with existing industrial conditions, and many more in Pennsylvania are going back now because the republican party in this state has already enacted into law several of the more important policies called for by the progressive platform of 1912."

"The republican party needs our votes; it is inviting us to come back, and, it seems to me, is ready to come half way to meet us. With conditions as they are, I am pleased to see this movement. I am convinced that there is nothing more important in American politics than the reunion of these two parties before 1916, and I intend to do what I can with propriety to bring about that reunion."

This is a symptomatic statement. While there may be a few men who held important positions in the progressive party who still believe in the vitality of this movement and who will persist in keeping up an organization whose weakness grows more evident from day to day, the great bulk of progressive leaders and of the progressive rank and file are back in the republican party, and, like Dr. Temple, are doing what they can to bring about complete reunion of the men who differed in 1912, and those differences brought upon the country its withering weight of democratic woe.

Democrats who recall the days of the last wretched democratic administration and the Wilson tariff bill are not disconcerted by a little thing like a treasury deficit, whether it be $37,000,000 or $57,000,000. They know that a treasury deficit is the ordinary accomplishment of a democratic administration and a democratic tariff law.

Of course Mr. Bryan's motto is not "Peace at any price". That is, if reference is had to peace in the democratic party.

a dragnet the other day and brought a dozen bank examiners in to Washington, where he made a speech to them. He told them that, under the federal reserve system it is practically impossible for a member bank to fail if operated within the law and with ordinary prudence and common sense. But why "under the federal reserve system" especially? A bank which is honestly and prudently conducted cannot fail under any system.
