WAR MUNITIONS NO BAR TO LOAN

been embodied in the proposals, was that the money each bank should guarantee toward the loan should remain in the bank guaranteeing it until occasion should arise for its use. Then, it was said, each of the big syndicates of underwriting banks would be called upon for its proportionate amount, using the ratio of the sum desired to the whole sum as the basis of assessment. For instance, should one bank subscribe for $1,000,000 of the bonds, the full amount would be left in its vaults, it was thought, simply being transferred on its books to the credit of the loan syndicate.

Will Not Tie Up Loan.

With this having been done, should it be found desirable to have one-fourth of the entire credit available in New York, the bank would be called upon to transfer one-fourth of its subscription to New York, or $250,000. The idea of tying up the full amount of the loan at once seemed to be unattractive to both parties to the negotiations.

Many American bankers were of the opinion that one-half of one per cent allowed them for their services would be on that basis for each year of the loan. Thus if the loan should run five years, it was thought, the banks would obtain the bonds at 97½, or 2½ per cent below par.

Another proposed feature, it was reported that the short term bonds, whether five or 10 years, should include the privileges of conversion to long term British and French government bonds paying 4½ per cent interest at the end of the short term period. By that time, it was thought, the war would have passed into history and the long term bonds, being a first mortgage on Great Britain and France, and having a life of 50 or 100 years, would be regarded as a prime investment and would fetch more than par.

In the absence of official announcement, the situation was said to be encouraging. In this connection it was reported, but without confirmation, that a member of one of the chief New York banks of the so-called pro-German group had made overtures to the commission looking toward placing its name on the subscription rolls.

VILLA'S FORCES AGAIN DEFEATED BY CARRANZISTAS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—The state department today received word from General Pershing that Villistas forces suffered a severe reverse at the hands of Carranzistas forces and were retreating along the international border. Following the receipt of the telegram the war department ordered reinforcements to be sent to General Funston, who is stationed at El Paso.

THE COX FAMILY.

The Klamath Falls Herald says: "It is seldom that a vaudeville company can book a town for a week's engagement, change program every night and make good with every show. But it is different with the Cox family. They have been at the Star four nights, and the fourth program was as good as the first, which is saying a whole lot. It is expected that the remaining programs will come up to the standard of their previous offerings. Tonight the Cox family will present the Italian Music Master, new song numbers and comedy will be introduced."

The Majestic has engaged the Cox family for the week, offering a new show each night with a full program of pictures. The pictures for tonight will be "The Flaming Sword" a Metro feature in five parts with Jane Grey and Lionel Barrimore, the two noted stage stars.
