The Most Judicious People

In social and business life are those who, being genuine themselves, are able to estimate justly the quality of genuineness in other people and things. They are distinguished mainly by reason of their sense of appreciation and their enthusiasm accorded that which is worthy. They are the free-thinking, unbiased, broad-gauged, sane folk, who, through the gift of discrimination and enthusiasm desire and strive for that which is best.

Now, best in drugs and medicines does not consist in elaborate surroundings nor in high prices, but rather in the inherent quality of the articles themselves. Neither high rents nor excessive overhead business expenses contribute to the basic qualities: It is purity, genuineness and proven efficiency that count.

All of which is true and reasonable and explains why the management of the Central Pharmacy has been successful; for be it known, our cardinal principle in business is to serve you genuinely, faithfully, to give you what you ask for (or if we haven't it to say so without quibbling over some substitute). This we believe will win YOUR appreciation as it has won the appreciation and patronage of hundreds of satisfied customers who now trade at that handy little drugstore on the corner of Cass and Jackson streets, where pleasant treatment, low prices and dependable qualities await you.
