BAND MUSIC IMPORTANT TO SOLDIERS

Musicians Follow Their Comrades
Into Battle, a Custom Which No Council of War Would Be Able to Change.

By William G. Shepherd.

(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

SALONKI, Dec. 11.—Our ambulance rushed down the mountain-side at French chauffeur speed and into a valley behind Hill No. 515 which sheltered us from shell fire and at last, we were so far away from artillery battle that we could barely hear the guns.

Valandova, an old Turkish village in southern Serbia was to be our stopping place. There, in the early evening, General Ballaud, whose brave troops—nearly all of them zouaves—had fought their way to Krivolak and had there tried to reach the Serbians and form a junction with them, was to receive, with field ceremonies, the order of military merit. But we were too late. The ceremony was over. However, we were astonished to see in a Turkish mosque a French zouave band.

It was the first band that any of us had seen near any battlefield on both sides. Band music hasn't much place in this grim war. There were ninety musicians and five drummers and they stood in the mud up to their shoptops.

"Can't you get them to play?" we asked our guide. "It's the first band we ever saw near a battlefield."

"Will you write stories about it?" asked the leader. We said we would. Whereupon standing in the mud, in the evening dusk that was almost darkness, with the Turkish mosque behind them and two French officers standing fifty feet above us in the minaret the band struck up the song of a certain regiment of the zouaves.

Some members of the band sang; they played on their horns in relays so that we had a chorus, a band and a rifle and drum corps going all at once. It was a rattling good tune, and, as all zouaves are about the desert and Egypt and Arabs, these zouaves in Serbia didn't sing of Germans or Austrians or Bulgars, but of their enemies of other wars. A translation would go something like this:

"Bang! Bang! the Arabs!
The wolves aren't far away.
Forward! Hurtle forward!
And let your rifles play.

We gave three cheers for the band and the band gave three cheers for us; the bandmaster made us promise again that we would write a story about how his band played, and then we were ordered to get back into our ambulance for the ride to Strumnitza where we were to spend the night. If you hear anyone say that there is no music in twentieth century warfare, that men no longer die to stirring tunes, just tell your informer that he's wrong.

The French zouaves have a band and it goes with them right up to the front and it plays while they fight and while they die. There are some things a regiment won't give up, no matter what the war councils say or what the major thinks.

To the French zouaves this thing is their band.

This was on December 2, and that morning General Sarrail back in Salonki had ordered his soldiers to retire. The band had marched down to Valandova. Perhaps they didn't know that their march was part of a retreat, but while they were playing so blithely about the Arabs their fellow soldiers in the mountains were packing up their things in their dugouts and awaiting orders to retire from their mountaintop trenches.

We were taken to a hospital tent at Strumnitza and found a dozen hospital cots ready for us and our military guide. In the center of the tent was a big wooden stove which a huge French soldier kept filling with firewood. The lights were candles.

A canvas tunnel ran from our tent to another, in which lay 30 French soldiers whose feet had been frost bitten.

"We start tomorrow for Paris," one of them said. "But it's a long way. First we ride by train to Salonki. Then they put us on a boat, they tell me, and take us out to a hospital ship. Then the ship travels eight or nine days until it reaches Marseilles. Then we get on a train and ride 24 hours until we get to Paris. It seems far, far away, Paris. But I suppose we'll get there some time.

He was suffering from gangrene following frostbite, and the chances were, the doctor told me, that he might be a cripple for life. He was sick and suffering and he had a right to feel that the miles and the days between home and this canvas tent in Serbia would be many and long. It was supper time and a big banquet, of a sort, was before us. We were to hear more rumors of the coming retreat. Our tent stood on an embankment alongside the railroad track. On the bank across the way stood the little Strumnitza railroad station, where we were to dine.

When we came out of the tent into the darkness a wonderful sight met our eyes. The lights of hundreds of campfires shone on hundreds of tents which had been pitched for the night by the withdrawing troops. We heard singing and a mouth organ.

CHARLES CHRISTIE PASSES AWAY

After a serious illness of about a week, C. C. Christie died at his home Washington street last night. Mr. Christie's health has been very poor for several months, but it was only a short time ago that his condition became critical.

Charles C. Christie was born May 4, 1873, at Fort Wayne, Ind. For several years he resided in that city, going from there with his parents to Iona, Mich., where he obtained his schooling and learned his trade of machinist. He was married June 24, 1896 to Carrie M. Smith, one daughter, Alberta, being born to the union.

In 1901 he came to the Pacific coast and settled in Roseburg five years later. After his arrival in this city he was employed in the machine shops of the Southern Pacific company until the strike a few years ago, after which he became connected with the county assessor's office and for the past few months has been manager of the Roseburg-Myrtle Point stage route.

He is survived besides his wife and daughter, by one sister, Mrs. L. G. Hicks, of this city, and a brother, Walter Christie, of Roseburg, who is expected to return tomorrow from a tour through the state of Montana, the illness of his brother having been announced to him by telegram.

During his residence in this city Mr. Christie has made many close friends who are grieved to learn of his death. His work for the railroad company gave him a wide acquaintanceship as also did his work as appraiser of property while connected with the assessor's office, where his careful consideration and efficient workmanship won for him many friends over the entire county and it may be truthfully said that his friends are to be numbered only by his acquaintances.

He was a member of the local Masonic lodge and also the I. O. U. W. order.

The funeral will be held from the Roseburg Undertaking parlors Monday at 10 a. m. R. E. Jope, pastor of the Christian church officiating. Interment will follow at the Masonic cemetery where the Masonic order will officiate.

FREQUENT TESTS ILLEGAL

Attorney-General Holds Teachers
May Be Examined But Twice

SALEM, Or., Jan. 22.—Teachers' examinations cannot be held in one county at any other time than provided by law. Attorney-General Brown has informed J. A. Churchill, state superintendent of public instruction in response to an inquiry of that official.

"Plainly it is the intention of the statute," says the attorney-general, "to provide for only two examinations during the year and the inconvenience and expense of calling together the state board of examiners do not seem authorized by the statute."

SOME OF THE INQUIRING ABOUT DOUGLAS COUNTY

Following out a promised innovation in the conduct of affairs by the Commercial club, a list of inquirers is here presented, with an abstract of their letters for the benefit of the citizens of this county and city. These letters are identified by numbers, and the original may be seen by any interested person, and the name and address secured by application to the secretary.

Inquiry No. 1, wants a small tract of land somewhere in Oregon, preferably in Douglas county.

Inquiry No. 2, looking for an opening for a hotel or rooming house, and would also consider the development of a mineral spring for resort purposes.

Inquiry No. 3, contemplates coming to Oregon to buy a farm.

Inquiry No. 4, wishes list of farms for sale or trade.

Inquiry No. 5, is interested in farm for stock raising purposes.

Inquiry No. 6, would consider locating here if he could purchase land at a reasonable price. Also name of parties who might buy timber land.

Inquiry No. 7, wants to buy seed potatoes.

Inquiry No. 8, interested in the purchase of a farm or small fruit ranch, 5 or 6 miles from town with 5 or 10 acres of prune or general orchard.

Inquiry No. 9, wishes to trade Portland property for acreage near Roseburg.

From five to 15 letters are received daily by the Commercial club asking about the Umpqua valley. These are answered and small booklets mailed descriptive of Roseburg, the Umpqua valley and Douglas county. If no answer is received in a reasonable time, follow up letters are sent, and every endeavor is made to interest the inquirer, nor is the matter allowed to rest until it is shown conclusively that here is "nothing doing". This is only one of a number of methods which will be used to make the Commercial club of value to residents of this county and city.

LA FOLLETTE WILL RUN

Senator's Supporters Confer and Name Will Be Presented.

MADISON, Wis., Jan. 22.—Any doubt that Senator La Follette would not take an active part in the presidential campaign was dispelled when a secret conference of about 30 leading progressive republicans from all sections of the state was held here.

Senator La Follette would make no statement following the session.

It is certain the senator will go after the Wisconsin delegation.
