Jury Frees Woman Who Killed Man Threatening to Expose Her.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 26.—A jury in the superior court yesterday freed Mrs. Mary Pamlas, arrested last October when she confessed that she had killed a former sweetheart with an axe, cut his body into chunks, and stuffed it into a box couch where the police found it. He was Michael Weinstein, with whom Mrs. Pamlas had been friendly in Atlantic City.

The jury exonerated Mrs. Pamlas of the murder charge on her plea that she had killed Weinstein because he tried to coerce her with a threat that he would expose her to her husband.

THEY CAN'T DO IT, YOU KNOW.

(From The Nebo.) I've heard people say that the world they'd surprise.

But they can't do it, you know; With ships like balloons, they'd soar to the skies,

But they can't do it, you know, While some other fellow who hasn't a cent,

Are on a most wonderful patent intent; And perpetual motion they'd like to invent,

But they can't do it, you know. Some fellows are partial to cutting a swell,

But they can't do it, you know; Each are intending to wed a rich bell,

But they can't do it, you know. Some fellows are trying some method to seek,

To wear handsome raiment and jewelry unique; And pay for the same on ten dollars a week,

But they can't do it, you know. My landlady's bill I endeavor to pay,

But I can't do it, you know; I try to eat boarding house steak every day,

But I can't do it, you know. Her coffee so muddy, her doughnuts so dry,

Her back number cakes and celluloid pie; To eat them and enjoy them, how vainly I try,

But I can't do it, you know. I tried my hardest the quizzes to pass,

But I didn't do it, you know; The hardest questions all in a mass,

But I didn't do it, you know. The history threw me quite into a fit,

And so did the questions on first English lit; I tried to scratch thru, and missed it a bit,

But I didn't do it, you know. —ROBERT E. LEE.
