AMERICANS TOLD TO QUIT MEXICO

French attacks around Verdun and further successes on hill No. 304 is claimed in an official statement issued by the Berlin war office.

It is claimed that 53 officers were captured and 1500 men in the fighting around hill 304, since last Thursday.

Hand grenade fighting was reported throughout the night in the Vaillette woods.

On the eastern front the Germans are reported to have stormed five hundred yards of Russian trenches and captured 3,900 Slavs.

Transport is Sunk.

ROME, May 11.—A French submarine operating in the Mediterranean sea, destroyed an Austrian munition transport, it has been officially announced. It is believed that the members of the crew perished.

Allies Active in Greece.

SALONICA, May 11.—British artillery fighting was reported today on the northern Greek front. The Bulgarians are being reinforced south of Monastir and are making elaborate defenses. It is evident that they are expecting an attack from the allied forces who are concentrating near Florina.

MYRTLE CREEK HAS ANOTHER ROBBERY

A gold watch and several dollars in money was the haul made by a burglar at the Myrtle Creek hotel last night. The local officers have received notice to look for the watch which had the name of Dyer engraved on the case. No details of the burglary are known.

Myrtle Creek has been having its share of robberies lately, having had three inside the past month. The store of Rice Bros. & Adams has been entered twice and money and merchandise appropriated. It is thought that the crimes have been committed by local talent and the officers are working on that theory.

ARMY HYDROPLANE FALLS, TWO DIE

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Two persons were probably killed and three known to be badly injured when one of the largest hydroplanes in the country threw one of its propellers while flying low and dove into the Potomac river.

L. Z. Grants, aviator, and Charles Good, student, are believed to be dead, and Thomas MacCauley, pilot, Mayo Dudley, newspaperman, and Mechanician Utter, were injured.

The hydroplane had a carrying capacity of sixteen persons. The machine had started from the navy yard on a test flight and had traveled ten miles when the accident happened. Dudley, MacCauley and Utter were thrown from the machine as it took its plunge. Grants and Good clung to the pitching airship and were still there when it plunged into the water. It is believed that they are under the wreckage at the bottom of the river.

MEANEST MAN IN ENGLAND IS DEAD

Was Owner of Large Estates in Ireland.

NOT BELIEVE IN MAKING IMPROVEMENTS

Was Forced to Sell His Land to the Government to Be Divided Among the Irish Peasants.

LONDON, May 11.—Lord Clanricarde is dead. Lord Clanricarde! The man the British people called "the meanest man in England!"

What the London papers did to his memory, even before he was buried, was sufficient. "The meanest man in England!" For half a century he held that distinction. Today, in glaring columns, amidst the war news, the London papers told the story of Lord Clanricarde's life. It is a story particularly for Irish folks in America. It was men like Clanricarde who drove the Irish to America. He was the meanest Irish landlord.

Clanricarde's grandfather was Canning, British prime minister in 1827. His uncle was the first viceroy of India. When he was young Clanricarde got the idea that God made a few very rich, fine and cultured people to be human beings that everybody who wasn't rich, fine and cultured wasn't human. Human rights, as he knew them, were the rights of the rich.

Canadian soldiers in Hyde park, not knowing their London, have looked with wonder and pity on a little weakened up old man, in ragged, fifty-year-old clothes who used to sit on the public seats—the private seats cost two cents—a hard, cold look in his eyes. This was Lord Clanricarde, owner of twenty square miles of land in Ireland, with Irish peasants paying him $150,000 a year. This was Lord Clanricarde, once the swellest top in London, victim of the idea that God made him to be a specially fine human being, with special rights.

In 1874 he fell heir to the castle at Portunna, one of the finest houses in Ireland, and the estate of 60,000 acres. He thought he had fallen heir to the lives and souls of his tenants too. He paid one visit to the estate in 1874. He never returned. His tenants had demanded certain improvements and rights. He sent agents. More than one of them was killed. There isn't an acre of the land that hasn't its tragedy. Homes were broken up by poverty because of Lord Clanricarde's high rents. He demanded a large share of everything the tenants grew; he would not spend money for improving their pitiful homes. Blood was shed time and again, while he was in London, pottering around with antiques.

Irish landlords changed and became human; Lord Clanricarde, never. The government refused him police aid in evicting tenants; he hired agents to do the evicting. Decent people began to leave him alone. Of all the money he took in from his tenants he is never known to have spent a cent for improvements. He stood pat on the idea that human rights were the rights of the rich.

The splendid castle fell into ruins. Other Irish landlords began to sell their land to the government, to be distributed among the Irish peasants. Clanricarde would not sell.

A special bill was introduced into the house of lords, expropriating his estates. Though he was a lord and was entitled to sit in the house of lords and help in the government of his country, Lord Clanricarde never appeared until the chances of losing his land arose.

One day a shabby, bent, hard-faced little old man appeared at the door of the house of lords, but when he attempted to enter the policeman stopped him. It was Lord Clanricarde.

He protested in a piping voice. He talked of property rights. Property had its duties as well as its rights, said someone. Then he walked out of the place.

He became a solitary miser. He spent money for antiques only. His cheap rooms were filled with rare articles, littered about carelessly. No fire burned in his grate.

Antiquity dealers and the lawyers he hired to try to prevent the government from taking his land were the only human beings he knew.

Last year the government won.

Today the Lord Clanricarde estate is being divided for sale to small holders.

Lord Clanricarde was paid a million and a half dollars by the government and the day after his death, while he rested in his rich mahogany casket, he got a million and a half dollars worth of the bitterest advertisement that was ever given a human being.

THREE ONLY SAVED FROM ROANOKE

PORT SAN LUIS, CALIF., May 11.—While patrols watched the beach and breakers for the bodies of the 47 who are believed to be dead from the Roanoke disaster, a wireless from the steamer Lansing was received which said she had gone over the scene of horror, and found no trace of any survivors. Rumors that another lifeboat had been found containing a single corpse are found to be unsubstantiated, and is discredited. As far as known, the only ones who escaped death are Joseph Eib the quartermaster of the ship, and two Mexicans who drifted ashore with five dead bodies in a life boat last night. The Mexicans were unable to talk. Eib said today that two life boats were swamped in leaving the sinking ship, and two others are still unaccounted for.

Manuel Lopez, one of the rescued Mexicans, recovered sufficiently this afternoon that he could tell the story. He declared that the Roanoke crew was inexperienced, and the cargo badly loaded. He said he had protested to the captain and begged the skipper not to take his wife with him on the voyage. He asserted that the Roanoke began to list heavily hours before she finally sank. They attempted to call for help by wireless, but found the radio damaged. Signals then were hoisted, but no ships saw them. The life boats caught the davits and capsized, five of them floated but two were swamped. The one still missing contained only John Dennis, the second officer.

Quartermaster Eib said he first entered a life boat which was swamped because of bad handling. He then swam to a floating plank and later was picked up.

SPEAKERS ADDRESS WILSON LEAGUE

With sixty five prominent democrats in attendance the Woodrow Wilson League met at the court house last night. The Juvenile Band played several selections on the street and at the court house preliminary to the session which was called to order by the president, L. A. Ueland. He called attention to the next regular meeting which will be held at the Armory, May 16, when a literary and musical program will be given, followed by a social hour.

The first speaker was Judge T. H. Crawford, of LaGrange. He was followed by J. W. Morrow, of Portland, each giving a brief talk on the formation of the new organization and its policies and incidentally mentioned their candidacy as delegates-at-large to the democratic national convention.

The principal speaker of the evening was Hon. Milton A. Miller, of Portland. His address on the democratic administration, was enlightening and inspiring and he paid a glowing tribute to Woodrow Wilson and expressed his confidence over the reelection of President Wilson. He reviewed the accomplishments of the present administration and how it has fulfilled its pledges in bringing forward a tariff bill which really reduced the tariff. The federal reserve bank act was also praised as one of the decisive moves of the democratic administration. He also spoke briefly of the opposition and end brought out some of the planks which will undoubtedly form a part of the republican party at the coming election.

C. R. Shipman returned last night from a business trip to Portland.
