IS TESTING OUT JITNEY ORDINANCE

Before a jury composed of C. L. Hadley, J. P. McKay, N. G. Gray, A. Creason, Carl Ohman and Geo. Ritter, Ed. Hinkle, proprietor of the Roseburg-Peel stage line today tried out the jitney ordinance passed by the city council which requires all stage lines carrying passengers partly within and partly without the city to furnish a bond and pay a license.

Mr. Hinkle maintains that he does not collect fares for passengers carried inside the city, but his charges begin with the city limits and extend to Peel, the destination of the stage. He contends that owing to this fact and that he has custody of the mails going to this district that the city has not authority over him and that he is not required to pay the amount demanded by the city.

The city on the other hand maintains that as long as the passengers are delivered to respective places about town and are also taken from stations at the post office and hotels that it is operating inside the limits and a part of the fare charged is for this distance.

Attorney Albert Abraham represents Mr. Hinkle and City Attorney Wimbler is defending the ordinance. The trial does not start until late this afternoon and was still in progress at the time of going to press.
