

Let Wintry Winds Blow—Screen Stars Are Ready

And, Outside or In, Triangle Styles Are Latest Dictates of Dame Fashion

Margaret Thompson

Enid Markey

Dorothy Dalton

Louise Glaum

The screen has taken its place for all time beside the metropolitan speaking stage as a setter of fashion. Where as costumers formerly crowded theatres in large cities during the first week of their run for hints on advance styles, they are now found attending the first run picture houses for moda du jour.

There is something infinitely more satisfactory in the screen as a medium. The influence which it exerts upon national wearing apparel is more uniform. One does not have to wait an entire season before seeing the models first hand when the play takes to the road; prints of the identical film are shown almost simultaneously from one end of the country to the other—from Kalamazoo to Keokuk, from Kokomo to Kalamazoo, and then some.

Most of the large studios now maintain well-known modistes on their payrolls, so patrons may be assured that the gowns of their picture favorites are absolutely up to the minute, unless their roles call for dressing in another age. This is particularly true of the Triangle organization; and, by way of demonstration, there are given here with four late examples, all of them stars of the Triangle-Kay Bee studios.

A charming and chic street dress worn by Margaret Thompson in one of her recent pictures is shown above at left.

Of black brocaded velvet, the gown is designed along simple, straight lines, coat effect.

An elaborate sash is fastened about the hips, from the ends of which dangle metal balls and knots of ermine.

A Victorian ruff of ermine is worn about the neck of the gown, while Miss Thompson carries an ermine muff to enhance the beauty of the costume.

A small velvet hat with a scalloped brim edged with ermine is also worn, while tall bird of paradise flues extend upward at the back of the hat.

Enid Markey is noted for her quaint, charming, dainty and evening gowns.

She is shown above in the middle picture wearing a silver cloth and tulle gown, which is especially becoming to her cameo type of beauty.

The bodice of the gown has the Empire point of silver-colored taffeta, short sleeves of the tulle with tulle ruffles of taffeta and a French flower knot fastened at the left side of the short bodice.

The skirt is made with hoops, the underdress being of silver cloth, over which the tulle is flared in full lines, having seven ruffles of the taffeta standing out in crisp elegance as affected by mildness of the ante-bellum period.

The skirt is short, and silver slippers are worn with the gown.

Louise Glaum, Triangle-Kay Bee

siren, is shown below wearing a dancing frock of Chartreuse duchess satin with distinctive type of graceful drapery. Silk mesh lace is used at the bodice, also as a flounce. Butterfly drape of chiffon cloth is seen falling from the shoulders.

WESTERN UNION BUILDING NEW LINE

Roseburg Will Be Connected to Coast By Line Through Eugene.

A large force of Western Union Telegraph Company employees arrived in the city today and began work on a new line which will be completed between Roseburg and Eugene and on to Marshfield during the winter. A large floating plant was fixed and will be maintained here as long as it is practical to haul the necessary poles from this city.

The line will be entirely new and will connect Roseburg with the coast in a much more efficient and satisfactory manner than heretofore. The company has made many improvements in the Roseburg office during the past few months and the city now has one of the finest and most thoroughly equipped offices on the coast.

A Distinctive Reason

What is the chief reason for the superiority of Royal Baking Powder?

There are several good reasons, but there is one which distinguishes Royal from other baking powders.

This reason, which every woman should know, is that Royal Baking Powder is made from cream of tartar, which comes from grapes. This means a healthful fruit origin. It means natural food as distinguished from mineral substitutes used in other baking powders.

There is no alum nor phosphate in Royal Baking Powder
