CITY RECORDER REPORTS TONIGHT

Will Give Council Statement of the Condition of City Finances.

CONDITION EXCELLENT

Books For the Past Year Show That City Receipts Have Been Slightly Greater Than The Expense.

Following the usual practice City Recorder R. L. Whipple has prepared his annual report which will be given to the city council at their regular session this evening. The report shows that the cash on hand this year is a little less than the beginning of 1916 but with the fact must be taken into consideration that the city has made several purchases, chief of which was a fine fire truck and has made many repairs on the city hall, together with buying some property in lien foreclosures. The improvement fund is also shown to be in excellent condition and constantly diminishing.

The report follows:

To The Honorable Mayor and Common Council, Roseburg Oregon.
Gentlemen:

I herewith submit my report and financial exhibit of the general and improvement funds of the City of Roseburg, Oregon, for the year ending December 31, 1916.

Respectfully submitted,
R. L. WHIPPLE,
City Recorder.

CLEWS ARE OBTAINED.

City Marshal Williams this afternoon stated that he had a clew to the parties who last evening broke the window of Powell's second hand store and stole a pair of gloves and a camera. He says that Night Officer Wilcox was last evening accosted by several young fellows who were anxious to buy some gloves and being unable to purchase any on Sunday probable decided to steal them. It is the opinion of the officers that the culprits left on train No. 16 last evening and an effort will be made to apprehend them.

WILSON OUTLINES HIS PEACE PLANS

Great and Small Nations Mus Be on Equal Footing.

LIMIT OF ARMAMENTS

Monroe Doctrine Cited as Good World Doctrine—Entangling Alliances Avoided—Equal Rights Guaranteed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—In a characteristic speech before the United States senate this afternoon, President Wilson outlined his peace program for the nations of the world. The plan is designed to permanently safeguard all countries against further aggressions. The president said that he spoke in behalf of the liberals and the genuine friends of humanity in every nation. He declared that lasting peace must be based upon equality and a common participation in a common benefit. The executive said that peace guarantees must not recognize or imply any difference between small and great nations, and cited the following as a basis upon which lasting world wide peace might be established: Added to the power and prestige of the United States should be the authority and power of every other nation, and these should collectively guarantee peace and justice throughout the world. The compact should be founded upon equal rights, and provide for a united, yet independent autonomous plan, giving to all governments complete freedom for the development of their several resources, provide for a direct outlet to the sea for each nation, and establish freedom of the seas for all countries, and establish a limit for armaments of every nation. In closing his speech, President Wilson said: "I am proposing that the powers shall adopt the Monroe doctrine as a world doctrine, so that no nation may seek to extend its policy or jurisdiction over any other nation, but every people must be left to determine their own policy of development, being unhindered in their efforts for betterment. I am proposing that all nations shall henceforth avoid entangling alliances and selfish rivalry. There will be no entangling alliance in a concert of powers when all unite to act in the same purpose and all live under a common protection."

The belligerents were given very explicit assurances regarding peace, the speech implying that the coming of peace should be without victory in so far as victorious terms imposed upon the vanquished are concerned.

Keeping Your Eyes Young

The eyes of many persons reveal their age. Your friends and acquaintances cannot help but notice that you are "getting along in years" if you advertise the fact by wearing double vision glasses with the conspicuous line or hump—by fussing with two pairs—by removing or peering over your reading glasses whenever you look at distant objects.

But there is a way to keep your eyes young in looks as well as in usefulness.

an income tax requires such a small part of the income, and the fact that you must have the income before any tax is due, makes it a high compliment to your frugality and business ability. It may well be called an honor tax. Regularly depositing a part of your salary, is the safest road to such an income, and both our advice and our assistance, to that end are yours for the asking.
