CANADIAN INVITES U. S. BUSINESS ORGANIZATIONS TO PARTICIPATE IN AFTER-WAR TRADE PREFERENCES

John Canadian—"Come on over and help me carry these bags across."

"If manufacturers in the United States desire to get the same trade advantages in Europe after the war, which the British Colonies are hoping for, they had better start now to establish branches in Canada and thus put themselves in a position to secure the preferential treatment that Canadian products are expected to receive in Great Britain and all her colonies, as well as in Russia."

So says J. S. Dennis, Assistant to Lord Shaughnessy, President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, in a series of addresses being given in the principal cities throughout the United States. In discussing "Uncle Sam's Neighbor on the North," Mr. Dennis says: "At the close of the struggle we shall have to put back into peaceful pursuit between 400,000 and 500,000 men, and unless we can encourage many of them to go on the land our problem will be a very serious one. We shall also need a large increase of population, especially agriculturists."

"A large immigration from Europe is sure to take place when the war is over. One result of the war will be to bring us preferential trade with Great Britain. We do not know what the preferential tariff will be, but we confidently hope that we shall have a 50 per cent preference over the United States. We also have an idea that we Canadians will have a sympathetic trade preference in countries that have been allied in this struggle with Great Britain. The trade possibilities in the case of Russia alone are almost beyond conception."

"We expect a trade preference there, and that is one of the reasons why United States business men should be interested. If you want to get in on the ground floor, come over to Canada and establish branch industries. Help us to extend our trade and get that 50 per cent preference. It is not a new thing for people in the United States to invest their money in the Dominion. You have several hundred millions of dollars invested there already, so we are not asking you to embark on anything new, but only to extend what you have already done."
