TUESDAY, JULY 24.

PATRIOTIC LITTLE CITIES.

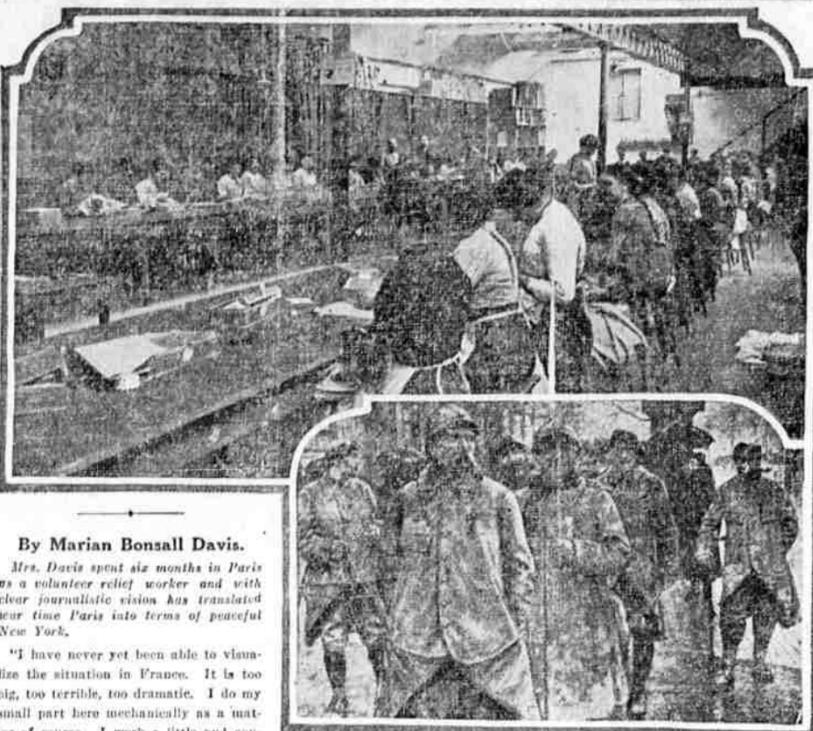

In the competition aroused by the Liberty Loan, the Red Cross subscription campaign and the army volunteering, the large cities have had nearly all the publicity. Anybody might suppose, from reading the metropolitan papers, that all the patriotism in the country is contained in the ten or fifteen cities having the largest population. It is likely that small towns in general have done at least as well as the big communities.

From a London cable we discover that "moon's morning coats and tall silk hats are the latest articles of wear to be criticized as wasteful." There is a demand for a sartorial censorship to be applied even to these sacred pieces of "gentlemanly" apparel.

How would you like to be agglorized? Popular Mechanics says that among the curious customs of the Philippine Islands one of the most peculiar is that of "beautifying" the teeth by filling and blackening them, which prevails among the Bagobos of Mindanao.

It will be a sad day for the alien that came to this country to escape war in Europe, to be drafted anyway, and sent back to the firing line.

If New York Were Paris We Would Know How "War Feels."

By Marian Bonsall Davis.

Mrs. Davis spent six months in Paris as a volunteer relief worker and with clear journalistic vision has translated war time Paris into terms of peaceful New York.

"I have never yet been able to visualize the situation in France. It is too big, too terrible, too dramatic. I do my small part here mechanically as a matter of course. I work a little and contribute my mite to the Red Cross. Why I do it, I vaguely know but cannot feel."

This statement from an active Red Cross worker probably represents the mental attitude of a large number of Americans.

To really get the "feel" of France today imagine New York were Paris.

There would be days of crashing bands and flying banners; glittering detachments of cavalry with hundreds of horse-drawn streamers floating out from gold helmets; aeroplanes and dirigibles buzzing overhead; transport motors rumbling and Red Cross ambulances speeding in and out of every street; organs and orchestras in the churches and cathedrals playing stately marches and brilliant fanfares on the fête days; soldiers coming and soldiers going; color—music—drums—thrills.

If New York were Paris there would be signs on some of the white marble mansions, "Hospital Auxillary 117," or "The Re-education of the Mutilated," or "Hospital for Men Blinded in Battle." The mirrors of some of the brilliant cafes would reflect aproned women sorting and packing bandages, blankets, shirts, pajamas; typewriters for the bookkeeping on the dining tables; fins of ether, labelled, ready for sending, on the bar.

Into the Pennsylvania Station and the Grand Central would pour streams of old people and children, looking bewildered as if in a dream—refugees. Big buildings in the city would be turned into hostels, and families from forty and fifty miles out, and also from great distances, who had built their little homes by a lifetime of thrift and saving, would live crowded with the remnants of two or three thousand other homeless families.

Soldiers—our men and boys—would forever be leaving those stations as they have started to leave in thin numbers) on their way back to the front after the short leave. In the subways we would see them coming or going, very matter of fact, with mud coming in or brushed off going out; bulky, worn shoes on their feet, battered steel helmets on their heads, heavy loads on their backs, and somewhere, always, always the mysterious bundle for or from home.

Some of them would have girls, some mothers, and some would be quite alone. We would have learned to read their uniforms, and would know from the symbols on arm and collar their military duty, the number of times wounded and their length of service. We would have learned, too, not to be surprised at seeing the medals for "conspicuous bravery" on the breasts of the ill-nourished, unpromising looking ones—we would know that they might have assumed command when the last officer had fallen.

If New York were Paris, at five o'clock in the evening thousands of persons would be starting to the different churches for the daily service of "songs and prayers for our soldiers." The sergewoman and the woman of fashion, the veteran of another war, the grimy private returning, the immaculate young officer starting out, the white haired scholar, the mother from the country come to see her son in the city hospital would pray there together.

Glorious heroisms would be lived in tenements, palaces and flats. A people would have been caught up into another sphere of consciousness by the inspiration of mighty sacrifice, becoming supermen and superwomen in a heroic age.

A few persons would remain untouched. But the great army at home, behind the army at the front, would count its glory commensurate with its sacrifice. Sometimes, if New York were Paris, the soldiers would start back to the front with hands, but oftenest, even when in detachments, not to music and not in military step. The rich, covered reward of days and nights of fighting, would sometimes be the saluting of the flag.

Our soldiers—men and boys—have started for those battlefields. Choking farewell. Prayers. Faith. Courage. Victory!

The American Red Cross asks for $100,000,000 immediately. It is needed for the Victory.

Following the course of every true American Prof. Durnam joined the signal corps and will leave for duty in France and for the past few days visited with his parents who live in the Garden Valley vicinity. While a resident of this city Prof. Durnam made many friends who wish him a safe return from the battle fields.

Live-wire Doings of City

Visited in Portland.

Miss Madge Miller, a young newspaper woman of Southern Oregon, feature writer and society editor of the Evening News, of Roseburg, recently motored to Portland and other northern points enjoying a vacation and gaining bits of feature stories throughout the state. While in Portland she visited sessions of the National Educational Association. Miss Miller is talented in many ways, being a clever musician as well as a writer of ability. She is assistant leader of the Girls' National Honor Guard, of Roseburg, and is one of the organization's enthusiastic members.

Miss Miller is a granddaughter of Dinger Hermann and a daughter of Douglas county's health officer, Dr. K. L. Miller—Morning Oregonian.

Will Pierce a prominent farmer of the Deer Creek district has purchased a Buick touring car from the A. D. Stradley agency in this city.

Visits Roseburg.

Professor Frederick A. Durnam of Seattle was a Roseburg visitor Monday when he greeted numerous old friends and acquaintances. Prof. Durnam was formerly a musician at the Majestic theater on Cass St., for several years recently moving to Seattle where he has been associated with the American Patoplayer company and of late with a theatrical concern.
