

Everything the House Wears!

We can furnish your home complete from top to bottom at a less cost than you can possibly procure goods of similar quality for elsewhere.

Frugality of expenditure on your part at this store does not mean common or unattractive furniture, rugs and hangings. Nothing of that kind ever gains admittance to our stock.

A better quality and a fuller value.

Solid construction along artistic lines are features that mark every article of merchandise found here.

We wish to call especial attention to our new line of Davenport Beds. We have them in Mahogany, Walnut or Oak. An attractive piece of furniture and a comfortable bed.

Live-wire Doings of City

People in Accident Reach Eugene.

Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Beal, of Wichita, Kans., who were in a bad automobile accident near Roseburg two months ago yesterday, are in the city for a day or two accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. B. G. Radabaugh, of Roseburg. The machine in which Mr. and Mrs. Beal were riding plunged down a precipice and had it not been for a tree against which the car lodged they believe they would have been killed. They were confined to a hospital in Roseburg for several weeks. They were driving the car up a grade when the engine became stalled. The brake refused to work and the car started down the hill backward, plunging off the grade.—Eugene Register.

Are Left Behind.

Quite an amusing incident was told by the boys who passed through today on their way to American lake. The boys state they have been entertained royally all along the line and at Redding the Native Daughters receive them. Nine boys were so enthused with their reception that the train had departed before they realized it. A car was hastily placed at their disposition and they were rushed down the line to catch up with the train. Their absence had been discovered in the meantime and the train was held until they arrived. One young man stated that the incident cost them the sum of $9.00.

W. A. Bogard returned here last night from Days Creek, where he has been assisting in the harvesting of his bean crop. Mr. Bogard stated that it will be several days before the entire crop will be harvested.

FLIGHTS MOSTLY BY DAY

Fleet Must Be Ready at Moment's Notice at Any Time to Answer Summons for Action Against Enemy.

BEHIND THE BRITISH LINES IN FRANCE, Aug. 31.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—Night, as well as day, is full of work and hustle at an army aerodrome. Night flights are not frequent, but the time when the mechanics are busiest, putting everything right for whatever tomorrow may bring forth. Long after the sun has sunk beneath the tops of the hangars and the trees have changed from green to black, the hard-worked airplanes drift homeward, crossing the evening sky like black specks on a purple cloth and landing with a deep droning on the clipped grass, lame and weary from a long afternoon's work over the lines.

The day's work is finished; reports are handed in, and the pilots saunter down to their mess tent among the trees. The mechanics appear, wheel the machines into their respective hangars, and the night's work is begun.

It is seventeen miles to the shell holes of No Man's land, and all the horrors of war. The long white road, thick with the dust of transport, is silent. The flat aerodrome is in darkness but the hangars, looming black against the evening sky, are bright within. There is much to be done. Mazes of wires must be overhauled; many be replaced or fastened. The enemy anti-aircraft artillery has been active and some of the planes bear witness of its work. The canvas wings of one machine are riddled and need long and patient attention before it will be fit for service again. On another, the flying struts must be renewed. On another, the wings are out of shape, the result of straining manoeuvres in acrobatic fighting.

The whole means a hard seven hours' work for the entire staff of mechanics. They settle down to it as a matter of routine. Every time a machine comes back from the lines it has to be overhauled, perhaps dismantled. New gadgets must be fitted, the engine repaired and cleaned. Airplanes are after all very delicate pieces of mechanism, and need continual attention. Without it they are useless, even dangerous. The accuracy of hundreds of measurements, the trustworthiness of hundreds of parts, are essential to good flying and reliability, and just as much depends on these factors as on the skill of the pilot.

The airplane mechanic doesn't share the dangers of the field or the hardships of the infantryman or artilleryman, but he has endless work, and a very heavy responsibility. When there is heavy air fighting he must frequently work all day and all night, and see beside the pilot if he should skip any of his work. Upon his shoulders rests the strength of the squadron and its efficiency. The officer in charge of the aero-

WATER PROBABLY INFECTED

Just as we are going to press City Health Officer Shoemaker received a partial report on the water sent in for analysis for typhoid infection. The doctor states that the analysis, although incomplete indicates strong suspicions of the presence of typhoid. Owing to this fact, the doctor again urges upon all users of city water to boil every drop of water used for drinking purposes, as that will safeguard against infection.

drome during the night hours is known as the "orderly officer." Warmly clad, to keep out the chills of the night, he walks around the busy sheds and hangars, now and then offering a word of advice or encouragement, but always with an ear for the telephone bell, for at any moment orders may come through for night bombing or the warding off of some hostile aircraft. Such orders are very rare, but everything is ready for them when they come. The work in the hangars is so arranged that the steeds appointed for the next day's work shall be ready an hour before dawn. As the first rays of the sun light up the aerodrome, the machines are wheeled out on the "tarmac," oiled and attuned for the morning's flight.

WHITE-REDBARN WEDDINGS

Miss Martha White, of West Roseburg, and Mr. Albert Redbarn, a railroad man in the employ of the S. P. Co., in this city, were married this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Levi White, of Harvard avenue. Rev. Warrington, of the Presbyterian church officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Redbarn will make their home in this city, where they have a large circle of friends, who wish for them a long and prosperous wedded life.

DRYING CONTEST AT STATE FAIR

It was learned this afternoon that the state fair board has asked that the drying contest at the county fair yesterday hold a similar contest at the state fair, and provision was made almost immediately by those in charge of the work here to hold the contest.

These two teams hold the distinction of being the only children's drying teams in the state, and as a matter of education in this work it is felt that a contest at the state fair will be of utmost importance.

Douglas is proud of her drying teams, and the credit for having the same is due to Mrs. O. C. Brown.
