BOLD "HIGHWAYMAN" IS ONLY A BOY

Much excitement prevailed in the five circles about five o'clock last evening when they were notified that a bold highwayman had arrested and taken away with him an officer and articles of value and later in the moon on the street a young boy, evening a night before the city who was when searched some of the articles taken was found on his person.

He was questioned at some length by the officers and having no other place to lodge the young fellow for the night, who by the way is still in his teens, he was placed in jail for some keeping. Evidently not liking his homelike surroundings the young man sought means of escape and soon wiggled his way through the hole in the big jail door and gained the outside corridor of the jail room and striking his head up over the transom, informed the excited officer who was seated outside that this (meaning the jail) was no place to put a "fallah" as it was infested with fleas. However, his plea had no effect and this time he was placed in a cell.

The boy who has big brown eyes that flash defiance, a straight forward story when being questioned by the officers, admitting his guilt, and told of other instances where he and his companions had made away with bicycles and other things of more or less value. According to his statements he had previously been committed to the reform school and after leaving that institution roamed about the country a great deal riding the "road" from place to place, and finally landed here.

MYSTERY IS SOLVED BY LAFFALOTS.

Among the "out of the ordinary occurrences" were the continued fun making abilities of two popular and clever Laffalot members, whose stage names are Sir Algernon Percival Hoppersnizen and Fritzzy Baby Doll. Sir Algernon and Fritzzy missed their collars. Vandeville and the bright lights fairly demanteth but no answer cometh.

In enumerating the many pleasant details one might gain a valuable start on a good sized novel. However, in a brief explanation it might be said that the "Laffalots" are a No. 1 entertainers—their hospitality supreme and their splendid collection of original preparations a complete revelation. On all sides they are known as royal good hostesses and the affair of last evening was a splendid example of their ability.

At 12 bells Alice was played and good nights were said—the faithful machines awaiting without were entered and the journey homeward was duly wended.

Among the distinguished guests of the evening and description of their clever portrayals were Miss Leone Goshaw, "Sweet Girl Graduate," attired in white with clover leaf medallions, Mattie Lee Stephenson, "Fritzzy Baby Doll," with evening dress trimmed in pink, Eva Rice, "The Original Vamp," the girl who plays Phyllis copied after black silk evening dress, extreme décolleté; Lilian Moore, "Flame," brilliant crimson, chiffon attire; Maxine Miller, "The Honian Lady Shado," crimson gown of satin, hoop skirt, pantaloons; Mildred Henry, "Girl of '59," Old Fashioned "Dance," white dress trimmed in pink; Mrs. Florence Devaney, "Society Lady," evening gown of black and yellow; Leah Skyles, "Bruttus Carthagen," another "vamp," evening gown of black trimmed in white, anklet watch; Bertha Kratch, "Miss Malachine," Turkish damask gown, hers of the Sultan's harem, Turkish costume; Phyllis Black, "Lorette Pluffe of the Russian Ballet," El fine, light, heart breaker costume of blue and white; Stella Krohn, "Maid of '76," yellow old-fashioned gown, embellished with black; Mrs. John Hunter, a woman's idea; Lena Hunt, "Mary King," very young and innocent, short dress; Klara Skyles, society debutante, had cut around in a pink and green evening dress; Florence Wharton, "Colonial girl," pink and white garment draped with lace and tulle; at regular intervals.

The laughing young men were Joseph Eschsch, "Sir Algernon Percival Hoppersnizen," prominent English dandy, extremely original and with provoking, Velton Bates, "Dave Young Soldier Boy," whose one desire is to be stationed at Fort Stevens in the hospital corps; Klara Skyles, "College President" quiet and staid; a regular team driver, extremely handsome and a sure hit with the girls, Louis Russell, "English-like business man," "entitled to be frivolous; Reginald Jarvis, "Who young man of affairs" quiet and unassuming, however tremendously popular; Evelyn Taylor, "The original Handsome Chap" a wicked but inclined to deceive his lady friends, in love with them all; Maxine Skyles, "The Boy with the Devany Eyes," a general favorite; genuine number—in love with certain society bud; Salomey favorite partner; Toka Harnes, "Sailor Lad," off the good ship "Mazel"; Belle Bridges, "Billy Heartbreaker," notorious "no get 'em" after the girls, extremely good to gaze upon; Clara Patrick, a regular fellow, recently appointed major in U. S. army, good to look at and a formidable foe of the Fritziess; Helen Krohn, mainly young college chap; "Boss Stepper," winner of the gold medals; Beniah Jew in terpsichorean, representing st. 1st. Lakes and Wrigley's Chew; "Lullum," a devil with the ladies; Katherine Devoy, "Isaac Goldenberg, Jew peddler," some popular ped at that stands six feet in stockings, is there for size; Helen Guest, colonel in U. S. regulars, a regular soldier as well as a regular gentleman, stocked with suggestions and ideas; Ruth Case, "Lord Helps Us," destination unknown, came from "somewhere in the world," nobody knows exactly, and Madge Miller, "Wearry Willie Hoboltus" valet of Lord Helps, a wanderer from the face of the earth, addicted to rambling the ties.

FIVE FOR CONVICTION ONE FOR ACQUITTAL

The case of Floyd Ramp, on trial for resisting arrest September 25, 1917, went to the jury last night at 5:30. The entire day was consumed in securing the jury and introducing testimony, which was of a more or less sensational nature. Several times during the course of trial the opposing attorneys clashed in the woody battles and at one time a witness setting among the many spectators became excited and entered a protest without first securing the permission of the court, much to the amusement of the crowd of interested onlookers.

RECRUITING CLOSED, E. J. GWYN TO LEAVE

E. J. Gwyn, recruiting officer of the United States navy, has received orders to close up the office here, and ship the equipment to Marshfield, where there will be an office opened, says the Eugene Guard. Mr. Gwyn has been ordered to report to Portland, but whether for recruiting duty there or elsewhere, or for duty at sea, he does not know. Mrs. Gwyn will remain in Eugene until she knows where he will be located. If he is ordered to sea she will in all probability either go to his people in California, or go to Kentucky where her people reside.

Mr. Gwyn said Thursday in connection with leaving: "On leaving Eugene and the many friends and supporters of the navy, it is with regrets that I go; but the navy is still calling for men, and they can enlist in Salem, Portland and through the postmasters, and I hope that the people of Lane county will still give us their support, and back us to the limit."

E. J. Gwyn is well known in this city and during the past six months has been stationed here at intervals in the capacity of naval recruiting officer. His many friends will regret to learn of his departure to other fields.
