FOR GERMAN-AMERICANS.

Listen, you so-called German-Americans, you Americans of German descent, you who have the privilege of pro-Germanism left in you, an American make-up. Listen to this article. It might have been written by Carl Schurz, or Van Hook, or Frederick, or Pulitzer. It is written by an American man of warman with pure-German blood in his veins, read it and think.

"Once there was a man came into our country from Germany. He came not out of love for America since he knew nothing about America. He came not to do anything, but to do things. He came here because he knew he would be received here with open arms and given a chance to make good. And he made good. He may have become a millionaire, he may have become a big business man, he may have become a successful shop-keeper. But anyhow, he made good.

"The United States in North America asked him no questions, but gave him a chance to make good as a man among men and he set about his tasks with a 'Good luck and God bless you' from the United States government. He... to pay no excessive taxes to maintain a volunteer army. He did not have to get off of the sidewalk to allow some drunken lieutenant to go by. He did not have to serve three years in the army. He did not meet with a sign of respect, and Verboten signs on every corner. He was allowed to choose his own government and in many cases to be elected as a part of that government.

"Now that government that treated him so well as it war with the government which did not treat him well. He sees Germany one thing and one thing only. He sees there many a label of thanks for making it so miserable for him that he headed for the Statue of Liberty and he should forever bless the day that he passed that Statue in New York harbor.

"He sees his success, his freedom, his fortune in the United States of America and to the Holy God of Justice if it doesn't grieve that he should be stripped of everything he made in this country, stripped down to what he possessed when he came here and told to go back to a whence you came with a strict order when to return.

"Mr. American of German descent, everything you are or have been or hope to be, you owe to our 'Old Sam'. Pay your debts, but pay your debts."

"You are an American citizen and the right and privilege to serve and even die in the army and navy of America were never farther away in the United States. Now have the boys' bodies and their families' bodies, for all the time they were in the army and navy, they were in the hands of 'Old Sam' and his army and navy."

HOW OLD ARE YOU?

He did not get old in the old world, he got old in the old world of the United States. He got old in the old world of the United States, he got old in the old world of the United States, he got old in the old world of the United States.

our house is just the same age," says Fern Life.

You know how that is. Father and Mother and all the rest in that come are boys and girls together. Some of them may have a few white hairs here and there. They do not count, hearts are all young. Each enters into the joys of the other. Nobody ever gets old in a home like that.

I know some farm homes where after the day's work is done, the boys and girls hang up around a little round table by the lamp-light and talk over with father and mother all things that have been done during the day. The chair after the wood stack, the work done with Old Jack and tell the bare necessities the news in the papers in short what each has been thinking and doing and planning. And I know those little groups sitting at a table more by candle and lamp light than all the big talks of all the statesmen of this world.

Life in those days gets pretty hot and busy before night comes. Arrive after from plowing. These are things where the handle of the hoe has pleased hard, a little bit more. And the heart gets a little bit more when at bedtime you look up the paper and look out over the world that evening. Now is the time to drop all the heavy and serious and talk over heart to heart the really big things, the bright things, the things that help to make life at home and true and earnest and worth while.

Father and mother, how old are you? Are you still boy and girl with those who have been given to you? How it would sweeten life if by and by the boys and girls who go out of the old home nest could look back, longingly and lovingly and say, "We are all still just the same age."

On all important events The Evening News readers can always depend on the Associated Press giving them a full and accurate account. The service does not make a specialty of giving just enough to set you deeply interested, then drops abruptly, leaving you to guess at the balance. A report of the big drama of the day when handled in this manner is about as worthless as not reporting the news at all. The Associated Press was in the only way to get authentic news of the big happenings in these war times. It is a service without a peer.

Cincinnati has adopted a new and extremely practical plan of eliminating liquor. It provides from through the city bearing placards inscribed, "Ordered From City of Cincinnati, War Work. Then it kicks them out. The U. W. committee ought to appreciate the placard-bearers at least. It harmonizes admirably with their marching song, "Hallelujah, You a Hero!"

The Germans scored their greatest victory in recent months by being the captives of a dozen American soldiers a hundred thousand are said to take the place of those dozen lost.

Folks who have had plenty of chicken on Sunday will not be surprised by a meatless Thursday. There will have enough scraps left to carry them over that contingency.

Our soldiers' outfit hopes that the plan to "house" the soldiers' wives will not be carried to the extreme of putting out the "lights" in Washington.

Modern automobile drivers come to have freedom from the old and slow horse. They are a class of citizens and the right to be protected.

It is well that the government is the only one that can do this. It will take care of the boys who are in the army and navy. They are in the hands of the government.

Remember the old saying, "Don't get into a quarrel with a man who is not your equal." It is a good rule to follow.

We think we should that the boys who are in the army and navy. They are in the hands of the government.

RUSS SITUATION LOOKS HOPELESS

Gloom is Tempered by Belief That Extreme Radicals Unable to Control.

A DEMOCRATIC PEACE

It Is Conceived That Kerensky's Flight From the Capital May Set Up Stronger Government.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9. Discouragement fell here over the news of the overthrow of the Kerensky government at Petrograd is tempered by hope that the extreme radicals who have seized the capital may not be able to extend their control over the army or any considerable part of the country. However, it is feared that much blood must be shed and the nation further demoralized before any power rises above the turbulent strong enough to control the situation.

The state department and the Russian embassy were without general advice tonight consequently they were not official comment on the outbreak. Informally, it was pointed out that with the telegraph lines and non-official news agency at Petrograd in the hands of the radicals, it would be hard to learn the true state of affairs, although there was no disposition to question the collapse of the provisional government's presence in the capital.

Whether the control of the channels of information will extend to interference with dispatches which Ambassador Francis and other diplomatic representatives, undoubtedly is being sought is not known. The suggestion that the new power at Petrograd may be short lived is based to an extent upon the fact that the Cossacks, the best military force in Russia, always have been reckoned upon to support a strong conservative government. It was conceived in some quarters that if Kerensky's flight from the capital should be able to bring to his support General Korniloff, the strong man of the Russian army with his Cossack backers, he might set up a new and stronger government at Moscow where he could count upon the loyalty of a majority of the population.

An obstacle to the success of such a plan is found in the possibility that Korniloff, controlled by the front party, would be forced to the hands of Kerensky, when the latter was loyal to the conservative party, and the conservative party might expect to risk his future fortunes upon such an uncertain leader. Some officials think this compromise to Kerensky was largely responsible for his departure.

In view of the intensity of the democratic spirit developed in Russia since the overthrow of the czar, it is regarded here as difficult to envision the appearance of any other form of government other than a republic, set in democratic cycles where the possible development of the Russian masses is well understood. The opinion is expressed that out of this wariness with respect to the people's movement, despite the efforts of the radicals, a democratic government will be established in the near future.

Revelations that occur the Bolsheviks' activities have suggested a democratic party, which is organized in the German idea. It is believed here, however, that on the basis of Kerensky's and Korniloff's past records, the Maximilian of 1868 is a poor one.

The overthrow of the czar government, it is believed, will be a great step towards the establishment of a democratic government in Russia. It is believed here, however, that on the basis of Kerensky's and Korniloff's past records, the Maximilian of 1868 is a poor one.

SOCIALISM MUST GO -SAYS GOV. HARDING

I am offering the following plan with the hope that through your teachers, you can make it a task of educational value and at the same time give the children something definite to do in helping to win the war.

First, secure a list of the soldiers who have gone from your community and have the pupils as a part of their regular English work write letters to these boys. The letters should be cheerful and newsy, telling of every community undertaking that would be of interest to the boys. Nothing but the best efforts of the children should be accepted, and the writing of the letters should be carefully supervised by the teacher.

Second, organize the pupils for the purpose of collecting regularly the best magazines from the homes, and send these to your own soldier boys. City superintendent F. Thordarson, of Bend, has already collected 5,000 magazines for this purpose. I have asked the state librarian to prepare a list of magazines, so that you may ask pupils to bring only those on the list.

Third, have the pupils watch the newspaper and magazines for interesting illustrated articles. Let them clip these and make scrap books, so that the schools will have them ready to send to the hospitals for the convalescing soldiers.

Through the organization which you are capable of perfecting in your schools, I believe we can furnish reading matter and letters from home to those who are protecting our homes at the sacrifice of their lives. No soldier should feel that the community does not appreciate what he is doing. The work will be educational, it will have a most wholesome moral effect upon the children, and I feel that no other institution can carry it out so systematically and therefore successfully as the public schools.

U. S. GOVERNMENT TO PREVENT SABOTAGE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9. The government is about to deny cable communication with neutral countries to a number of persons in the United States, including some American citizens, on the suspicion that they have furnished information to the enemy on military, naval and commercial operations.

Telegraph and cable companies, which have been under surveillance, with instructions to refuse transmission of their messages, some of the men under the ban are said to have been engaged by neutral organizations of corporations in European neutral countries or in Mexico, South and Central America, to gather information ostensibly for commercial purposes, but in reality for transmission to Germany.

The censorship action is but one phase of the program for tightening of control over enemy action in this country, now being formulated for early announcement. The plans include steps to prevent espionage, news and other sabotage, and to restrict the movement of the thousands of alien enemies who now are permitted to roam almost anywhere except within zones about camps and internment camps.
