WOUNDED AT VERDUN

Ambulance Drivers Terribly Mangled
When a Boche Projectile Bursts

Receive Medals.

AN ATLANTIC PORT Nov. 11 two American mothers, Mrs. McQuillen, of Philadelphia, gave proof today of her Spartanlike spirit of sacrifice to patriotism, when she and her wounded son, Prince McQuillen at the head of a banding ship, when an American steamer came in.

McQuillen, holding on a crutch with his entire right leg gone, and proudly wearing his uniform as a member of the American field ambulance service, was greeted by his mother with the words:

"Welcome home son," and the two fell into each other's arms.

With McQuillen, also on crutches, was his comrade, Wayne Veterine, also of Philadelphia.

Both boys were badly wounded before Verdun on August 2. They had three wounded French soldiers in their ambulance and were holding in a trench while under shell fire, when a projectile exploded in their midst. The four French wounded were killed, the ambulance wrecked and both Americans terribly mangled. When they recovered they found they had received the Medal Militaire and the Croix de Guerre and palm of war.

The ship which brought McQuillen and Veterine carried Representative George McNamee, of Illinois, just back from a survey of all the European fronts. He left the ship yesterday, returning to talk and presumably to catch a train to Washington to report to President Wilson.

Other passengers told of their ship repelling a submarine attack when in the Indian sea one day out of a British port. Passengers in the cabin at 8 o'clock one evening were startled by the sudden roar of the attack, mounted by one of the prize submarine crews of the navy. Those who rushed out on deck caught a glimpse of a horribly submerging submarine.

On that same evening the liner picked up two sailors from ships in distress, one of whom reported submarine attack.

Fourty Marsossa, winter, returned on the ship after several months' stay abroad. He was in Australia recently when the Italians met that peak and attributes the present Italian defeat to lack of coal and shells.

General California, Marceau, added to a certain number of circumstances, it may nearly all soldiers in the war and to my mind the Italianans prove the best in appearance and action.

Lemire," he continued, discussing the Russo-Japanese situation, will on his return head the new recruitment drive. He is undoubtedly a German agent and is the most dangerous man in Russia today.

For new power plant at Oregon the latest news is the Schenck power plant, 10,000 kilowatts, will be built in 1918. It will consist of two electric power plants, 5,000 kilowatts, and its construction is now正在着手中. It is to be located at the mouth of the Columbia River, about 10 miles from the city of Portland.
