SCIENTISTS TO PASS ON FOOD NECESSITY

LONDON, June 6.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—As a basis for calculating the amount of food which must be provided for the human system the Inter-Allied Scientific Food Commission has found that an average man of 154 pounds working eight hours a day requires food having an energy value of 3,300 calories. The commission consists of representatives of the United States, France, Italy, Belgium and Great Britain and its purpose is to consider the food problem of the allies from a scientific point of view, and in agreement with the inter-allied executives to make proposals to the allied governments. The commission agreed that, in event it should become impossible to supply 3,300 calories of food, a reduction of ten per cent could be sustained for some time without injury to health. The minimum ration of fat for the "average man" was determined upon as 2.5-8 ounces a day. The commission recommended that a uniform average milling extraction of 85 per cent for wheat be adopted throughout the allied countries, but this extraction may vary from 80 per cent in summer to 90 per cent in winter. The commission held sessions in London, Paris and Rome.

the whole length of the Rhine and the Saar, although she can, by robbing her battle-line, keep fighting planes on the Rhine to attack the raiders. However, when the British recently raided Saarbrücken, Germany lost three to one when she sent up fighting machines for defense work, and Saarbrücken was bombed just the same.

VOLUNTEERS SPECIAL SERVICE ARE WANTED

Calls have been issued upon this state for seventy chockermen, fifty head buckers, twenty four doggers, six general saw mill foremen and twenty-five planer trimmermen, to be furnished from class one, special and limited service only to be entrained for Vancouver barracks July 29, for engagement in producing spruce for aeroplanes. Men who are technically qualified under the above occupations and who are qualified for general military service may volunteer from classes two, three and four up to and including July 23. If on July 24 a sufficient number of volunteers have not come forth to fill allotments of local boards, boards will be directed to select a sufficient number of qualified men from within class one (special and limited service only) to fill their allotments, deducting voluntary inductions, in order that these calls may be allowed in such manner as will produce the required number of technically qualified men with the least disturbance of industrial and agricultural conditions. Boards are requested to advise by telegram immediately the approximate number of men held for special and limited service available under these calls. Only white men are wanted under these calls.

EMOTIONAL CRISIS DUE TO ALLIED RAIDS

LONDON, June 7.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—In the opinion of British government officials German's emotional crisis due to air raids on cities along the Rhine will be of long duration, with progressive attrition of German morale. The Rhine, they point out, is a broad river as well as a long one and it is an unmistakable guide to air-men flying high by day or night. Many munition towns are distributed along that stream, and also within easy reach of allied airmen are the iron towns dotting the river Saar. Germany cannot, it is argued, put up an effective air barrage along
