WORKING ECONOMY IDEA OVERTIME

The "economy" slogan is a splendid idea, and the American public has taken to it as a duck takes to water. Its practical application as a win-the-war idea is a fine thing, and as a developer of national thrift it can't be beaten. There is such a thing, however, as working the idea overtime, and there is such a thing as using it, under the guise of patriotic ardor, to carry out the most diabolical schemes of designing spite-workers.

Thus we find Sam Jackson and the Portland Journal waging a bitter campaign against the country editors of the state of Oregon, in advocating the delinquent tax law amendment and a new legal rate law. "Economy" shouts the Journal and its wealthy editor, and of course the voting public is urged to support the two bills bearing the earmarks of Samuel Jackson.

Economy is a fine quality for the state, as well as the individual, and were Mr. Jackson's motives actuated purely from the economy viewpoint, his daily editorials might ring with sincerity.

Look out for these laws. Editor Jackson has supported freak legislation before—most notably when the single tax idea was smothered by the voters of the state. The present statutes which Mr. Jackson would place on the Oregon law books, would have no more to do with an era of economy throughout the state of Oregon than would a bill to cut down the price of a shave. The thinking voter will give both measures a close analysis, and the thinking voter of the state will come to a conclusion on the worth of the measures about as follows:

Both measures should be vigorously swatted by the voters, for the very sane and simple reason that the present laws, passed by the Oregon state legislature, are fulfilling their mission, by protecting the public from the wiles of the title grabber. Any law that is protective and is of practical service to the people of the state should be let alone.

To be more specific the present delinquent tax law provides for publication of the delinquent list—but ONLY after a small notice has been sent to the delinquent and has failed to fulfill its mission. In other words the publication is simply a precautionary measure to inform the delinquent who has changed his address, or who through some reason fails to get his mail notice, that his taxes are due and payable. The effect of such a law cuts out the chances for the little grabber who hangs around the tax collector's office from the moment the taxes become delinquent, in an effort to line up and pick up some so-called "snap". A "snap" to the title grabber is the picking up of your property or mine, for the taxes due plus penalty and interest. It's a great business to follow, but just the same it is being done in every county in the state. Jackson would cut out this publication from the present law. Any sane voter can see the result. Let the present law stand the way it is, if you are in favor of protecting the taxpayer.

The other bill is to cut down the present rate for legal advertising. At the present time the law fixes the legal rate at 5 cents per line. The Portland papers asks usually $1.00 to $1.50 per inch for their commercial advertising. The state law makes the rate about 45 cents per inch. The thinking voter will decide for himself whether the rate is exorbitant. The newspaper men have a right to live. They are doing a most meritorious work in boosting war activity, and have won highest praise from President Wilson for their patriotic publicity work, which by the way is all donated to Uncle Sam. The thinking voter will concede that the country newspaperman has a right to exist. It is no time to throttle the press of Oregon, or any other state.

Swat the Jackson measures—both of them.
