"GLOOM IN WASHINGTON, JOY IN BERLIN"

If it were not for the fact that there is always a small element among the voters—yearly growing smaller as education progresses—that is likely to believe without thinking almost anything it hears the childish saying of some democratic speakers and writers that the election of Republicans means "gloom in Washington and joy in Berlin" would be something to laugh about. In fact it being pretty well laughed out of politics anyway, says the National Republican.

But if the election of Republicans causes so much joy in Berlin, we are left to wonder why there has been so great an absence of military in Berlin since the Republicans swept the state of Maine by increased majorities, and one would have supposed that Berlin would have gone into very ecstasies after Mr. Lemroot had been elected senator from Wisconsin over the active opposition of the administration. When the Republicans of Michigan brushed Henry Ford aside, after the President had asked for his nomination there, that should have caused a veritable orgy of joyousness in the Potsdam palace.

But yet one cannot help feeling that there is no great happiness in Berlin today. In spite of the gloom among the genuine Democratic caterwaulers responsible for these absurd and disloyal utterances, Berlin does not seem to be joyous. She seems strangely perverse in this matter and her moods do not respond to the opposite vibrations of the Democratic non-statemens of America.

For the truth is, as Berlin and the world now knows, but for the fact that the President could depend upon Republican leaders and members of congress to force through his important war measure at the time when he could not depend upon the men of his own party, we might not even now have entered fully upon this war, much less be waging it to a successful conclusion.

In practically every important instance when the President has wished legislation put over as a war measure, legislation that was needed if the war were to succeed, he has been forced to call upon the Republicans of the House and Senate to carry it through, because the democratic leaders of his own party refused to do so. And the Republicans, with fine patriotism, have done the things asked, putting aside all grievances they may have had due to the sectional and partisan favoritism shown by the white house.

The five great measures designed to increase the army and navy were piloted through the House under the direction of Julius Kahn, of California, ranking Republican member of the House Military Affairs committee, because the President could not count upon the support of these measures by Champ Clark, speaker; Claude Kitchin, floor leader; Chairman Dent, of the Military Affairs committee nor Chairman Pargett, of the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Twenty-seven Democratic Chairmen opposed these measures that were necessary if the United States were to do her part in the war, and the President was compelled to call upon the Republicans of the House to come to his support when his own party deserted him.

If there has been gloom in Washington and joy in Berlin" over any partisan happening since the United States entered the war, it must have been when Berlin came to know and the President to realize that the President of the United States could not depend upon his own party to back him in enacting the legislation necessary to carry on the war successfully.

But the Republican party has always been the nation's war party, when the necessity for war has become apparent. It was the Republican party that demanded preparedness on the part of the United States almost from the day the European war broke out. Had its words been heeded, the war in Europe likely would have been over long ere this. Even the preparation of this nation to enter the war on a great scale might have caused the struggle to end over there before this country had entered, and certainly would have ended it within a comparatively short time afterwards.

And the German government probably is not fooled by babyish catch phrases nor will the American voters be. The election of a circle republican war Congress in November would add overwhelmingly to the gloom that now permeates the German capital. In recent years there has been no occasion so important as this for patriots to vote for the restoration of the Republican party to power in our national assembly.

MEAT CAUSE OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take a glass of Salts if your Back hurts or Bladder bothers—Meat forms uric acid.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sour, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush out the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.
