BRITISH SHOW HUNS HOW TO MAKE RAIDS

LONDON, Nov. 8.—British air raids upon German towns and military objectives during the last 12 months of the war were nearly 5 times as numerous as the total number of air raids, made by Germany over Great Britain during more than four years of war. This comparison is shown by official figures, which disclose that from October 1917, until the signing of the armistice the British Royal Air Force made 709 bombing raids over German territory. In all, more than 660 tons of bombs were dropped on these raids. The base of the Royal Air Force was at Nancy. The average distance covered by each squadron on a raid varied from 120 to 160 miles. Under favorable conditions flights of 200 miles and more were made on many raids.

While this has not yet become a law, it is being considered by the officials there and it is possible that such a button may be required. The ordinance also provides that the council shall have authority to close all schools, churches, theatres, etc., and limit the time people may linger at the stores, depots and other places.

NO CONVALESCENT HOSPITAL HERE

Due to the signing of the armistice plans for the establishment of a convalescent hospital at Roseburg have been abandoned, according to a telegram received this afternoon from United States Senator McNary. During the war local business men very successfully undertook to have a hospital established here and the plan would doubtless have been accepted had not the armistice been signed. The telegram received is as follows: WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 8.—J. E. McClintock, president of Roseburg Commercial Club: Regret to advise office of the surgeon general refusal to grant permission for the establishment of a convalescent hospital at Roseburg, Oregon, due to the signing of the armistice, which makes such hospital unnecessary under the circumstances. Letter follows. CHAS. L. McNARY, U. S. Senator.

GREAT WAR DEMONSTRATES FOOD IS MOST POWERFUL MUNITION

Crops Growing in the Annapolis Valley, Nova Scotia

Melville Cumming

"Food will win the war," declared military experts. "Here goes!" said the farmers and by their increased efforts demonstrated the truth of the military's calculations. Nova Scotia farmers hold a place second to none in respect to percentage of gains achieved in increasing their farm products. The result has wiped out any pre-war conceptions of Nova Scotia as a wind-swept, rocky and barren. Visitors to Evangeline's Land know it as a land of hundred-mile long orchards; rich, dyked meadows covered with lush grasses or dotted with haycocks on stilts; fertile fields that yield immense crops of potatoes—the famous Blonocoon—all sorts of grains and the finest of flax. The recent reign of Mars is responsible for a big increase in the wheat acreage of Nova Scotia, the area having been practically doubled since the beginning of hostilities in 1914. Eleven new roller process wheat mills of the best construction have been erected under a policy adopted by the provincial Department of Agriculture for the encouragement of wheat raising. This is but one branch of that department's activities for it maintains several experimental farms and stands ready to aid the farmers in every phase of farming from supplying Mrs. Farmer with seeds for her flower and kitchen gardens, to providing full-blooded stock for Mr. Farmer and teaching him how to get the biggest results from them. Erection and operation of creameries goes on apace and marks the progress of the Province as a dairy country. The 1918 output of these co-operative creameries totals the two million pound mark which resolves itself into about 5,000 pounds per patron. The importation and distribution of high-grade, pure-bred stock under the supervision of Melville Cumming, Secretary of Agriculture, is largely responsible for the impetus enjoyed by this industry. Despite the fact that 1918 weather was largely unfavorable for farming, Nova Scotia has made a very creditable showing, harvesting 10,000,000 bushels of potatoes, 10,000,000 bushels of turnips, 5,250,000 bushels of oats, 700,000 bushels of wheat, nearly 1,000,000 tons of hay, and 500,000 barrels of apples. The total acreage under crop in 1918, exclusive of apple orchards, was 2,119,362 acres.
