STEVE GURNEY RETURNS HOME

Steve Gurney, of Glade, recently discharged from service, returned to his home today. Gurney was aboard the ill-fated Tuscania, and his brother, James Gurney, died as the result of the exposure incident with the accident in which both of the boys were involved. The deceased was sick with the measles, according to the brother's story, and was unable to withstand the shock. The returned soldier spent many months overseas and was engaged in several severe fights.

PONTIAC WILLIAMS

Private Pontiac Williams, One Hundred and Twenty-fifth infantry, is a full-blooded Ottawa Indian. He was born at Hart, Mich., and educated in the Indian school at Mount Pleasant. Little Pay but Much Dignity. The Japanese policeman has little pay but much dignity, and a traveler in that country thinks that the smallness of his weekly income is partly compensated by the fact that he carries a sword. Armed and decorated with this weapon, he is an all-round admiral and adviser of the Japanese public. The police tell the shopkeepers when to open and close their shops, censor plays and motion picture shows, tell people how to celebrate holidays, and have even been known to advise them as to the number of rice cakes that might properly be given as New Year presents. On the other hand, according to this observer, the police are not much interested in the behavior of burglars, and are quite likely to refrain from mixing in such matters. Possibly the criticism is not altogether just, but it is not impossible that the small pay may provide an argument for not engaging in the more serious risks of the occupation.
