QUAINT OLD FINNISH TOWN

Everything in Borga Seems to Go Back to About the Earliest Period of History.

The first glimpse of Borga from the water is a cluster of old wooden buildings carelessly assembled along the skyline. You gather that the town is red, owing to the bulky, crimson-painted packhouses in the foreground, but upon climbing up the steep, cobblestoned street to the town, you change your mind, and decide that it is going to be yellow. For all the funny, old-fashioned houses are painted that color. A little farther on, however, it comes upon you suddenly that Borga possesses a color scheme—that all the red and yellow is just a background for the splendid, solemn grayness of its ancient cathedral, which completely dominates the town from the depths of a walled courtyard of the type that was popular in the early fifteenth century.

Borga began about thirteen hundred and something, and must have reached its height about the seventeenth century, for it contains very little of a later date than that. The cathedral contains nothing more modern than an organ, for example. Its white and gold pulpit was carved in the sixteenth century, and its well-scoped and wonderful crystal chandeliers are remnants of other Finnish towns have replaced their marvellous chandeliers with less beautiful but more practical fixtures of the current century, but Borga proudly upholds the past. The Borga cathedral still measures time by means of a quaint old hourglass filled with sand.

It was in this cathedral that the emperor of Russia, Alexander I, received the oath of allegiance of the newly conquered Finns, a few days after he had signed the constitution which gave them their freedom. The house in which the constitution was signed—a modest, little, frame structure with old-fashioned, blue-painted blinds—is also pointed out with reverence to the traveler, and if you are duly sympathetic, the Borgans will then lead you up to the site of an old fortress reported to date back to an obscure period, even before the cathedral, when the Finns were heathens. It must be admitted that this site is anything but impressive now. There are some peculiar ditches, which, one is assured, are moats, and several barbed-wire fences which are supposed to enclose the ancient and venerable embattlements. Nevertheless, the place must have atmosphere. If you can only find it, for it was here that Walter Runeberg, the great Finnish poet, used to find the inspiration for so many of his splendid songs.

Stella Krohn left Saturday afternoon for Portland, where she will remain with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Krohn, until her marriage to Arthur Krauss, the event having been announced for August 12th.

J. H. Booth, of the Douglas National Bank, Saturday morning received a Horroghs Bookkeeping machine, which will be a valuable addition to the equipment of the institution. The machine will save a great deal of labour.

Fageol Walking Tractor

Mr. Quigley from the Central Headquarters will be with us during the next few days to assist in a series of demonstrations around the vicinity of the Roseburg territory. Demonstrations held upon request.

The Real and Only Orchard Tractor
Positive traction under all conditions. No loss of power through slippage—It does not pack the soil.

Carload sold last week in northern part of territory. The wonderful performance of the tractor at every demonstration convinces everyone of its superiority for orchard work.

Call up my office for location of next demonstration.
