The University of Oregon.

The State University has had an exceedingly prosperous year. The successes in athletics have been only surface indications of the enthusiastic and loyal spirit of the students, and of a strong determination to put the university to the front and make it stand strongly for Oregon.

A better and truer indication of the prosperous condition of the university is the high standard of scholarly work done during the past year. The University of Oregon is fast becoming a true university and is doing a continually advancing grade of work. Indications of this are the winning of the debating contest with the University of Washington and the three university men, two graduates and one graduate student to scholarships in great eastern universities where the competition is very heavy. The orations on commencement and the graduating thesis required of every one receiving a degree, were of unusual merit.

The outlook for next year is bright. The departments of the university have been strengthened by the addition of seven new instructors, men of the highest scholarship and training. McClure Hall, the new laboratory for chemistry and mining, is being fitted up at a cost of nearly $7000 and will be one of the completest and best in the country. The new engineering and power plant is in the process of erection and will greatly increase the facilities of the university in engineering. The university will then have eight good buildings, six of these of brick.

The present year will see the largest increase to the library in the whole history of the university. Nearly 3000 volumes will be added by exchange, gift and purchase, and by 1902 the university will have the largest library for scholarly research in the state. The number of volumes will be by the end of 1901 about 16,000 besides several thousand pamphlets.

A system of special lectures was inaugurated during the past year by which prominent men from different parts of the state were brought to Eugene to lecture on topics related to courses of instruction carried on at the university.

The growth of the university in numbers has been somewhat remarkable. The total number of students for all departments at Eugene for the year 1898-99 was 181; for the year 1899-1900 it was 220 and for 1900-01 it was 382, or a gain of 100 per cent in two years.

In cases of cough or croup give the little One Minute Cough Cure. Then rest easy and have no fear. The child will be all right in a little while. It never fails. Pleasant to take, always safe, sure and almost instantaneous in effect. Hamilton Drug Co.

Hottest Month in History.

New York, Aug. 1.—Hottest of all July in the history of New York was the month just passed, according to the weather bureau. July of 1887 came nearest with a mean temperature for the month of 67 degrees. The highest temperature for July of this year was 99 degrees on the second day. The lowest was 63 degrees on July 27. The mean temperature for the month was 78. August for the first few days at least will not be so unbearable for forecaster Emery is satisfied that the humidity will be less.
