Kate Clark, who conducts the apartments over The Office saloon, was arrested Tuesday evening on a charge of keeping a bawdy house, and yesterday afternoon, in Justice Buchanan's court, was given a hearing of a preliminary nature, the charge having been brought by the state, represented by Dist. Atty. Geo. M. Brown. The chief witness for the state was Jo. Pierr, who, a few days ago, obtained a judgment against Mrs. Clark for work performed in assisting to arrange the apartments for occupancy. In addition to Pierr, a large number of local residents were called to testify as to the general reputation of the place. It was shown to be of such unsavory nature that Justice Buchanan decided to hold Mrs. Clark to appear before the circuit court, and accordingly did so. He fixed her bail at $250, but she pleaded inability to furnish this amount and probable death if placed in jail on account of being a sufferer from heart trouble, so the amount of bail was reduced to $100.

THE RESORT

A. Riddle, of Riddle, was transacting business in this city today.

"Are You a Mason?" one of the brightest farces offered to the American public in years, comes to this city on Monday, Jan. 11th. Leo Dietrichstein, author and adapter of at least a dozen recent successes in the big cities, is responsible for the manuscript. It is considered one of his best efforts, and for real scintillating bon mots, and deep shafts of satire easily takes front rank in the humorous offerings of our times. Repartee abounds, and seems ingly inextricable difficulties are overcome by Amos Bloodgood in his efforts to convince his wife that he has joined the Masons, when he has not. By various pretexts, he keeps up the hoax until very near the end of the play. Much against his will, he is induced to attend a lodge social by a bona-fide Mason, and there before his wife and friends follows his undoing. The plot adjusts itself naturally and the final curtain finds him a candidate for Masonic orders.
