THROWN UPON THE STAGE.

The Way English Audiences Reward Popular Players With Gifts.

There have lately in the provinces been several sensational nights at prominent theaters when to mark the last performance of a local pantomime all manner of gifts have been thrown upon the stage for the benefit of popular performers.

All those acquainted for long with the inner life of the theatrical profession can tell some remarkable stories of these gifts cast upon the stage. The most celebrated and universal of these relates to a lady who once held the main portion of the lease of a prominent London theater. While this lady was still an actress only and not a manageress, an actress of great talent and beauty, there was one night on the best production of the piece a small bouquet cast upon the stage at her feet. Attached to the bouquet was a small Russian leather card case, and inside this were bank notes to the value of £1000 exactly. On no fewer than seven different occasions, with a tolerably long interval between, did the same thing occur, and the lady, as alleged, has never from that day to this discovered who her admirer was, though all manner of romantic conjectures were made at the time.

Even within the last few weeks an unknown elderly gentleman threw an envelope weighted with pennies and containing a five pound note to a tiny child performing in a London suburban pantomime. Some theaters have been celebrated for their gift nights, all manner of presents, from frying pans to green vegetables, having been gently deposited on the stage for the popular actors; yet, on the other hand, both writs and summonses have been handed to actors who could not be approached through the stage door, but who consented to receive presents over the footlights on their benefit nights.

The most curious sight the writer ever saw in connection with these gift throwing nights was in relation to a favorite actor who, at a great provincial theater, playing during a long pantomime run the part of a parasite named Cadet, who carried a pipe that had a huge bowl and whose oft repeated cry was, "Can any one oblige me with a bit of 'bacca?" On the last night of the performance the familiar request for a "bit of 'bacca" had no sooner been spoken than literally scores of packets and "screws" of tobacco of every imaginable kind were thrown upon the stage, more than 120 of these falling about the actor—London Times.

His Present.

"John," she said, "your little wifey has been saving up her money to buy you a nice present."

"Good little wifey," he replied.

"What is it?"

"A smoking jacket," she explained.

"And I saved the money all myself out of the house allowance. Wasn't I thoughtful?"

"Splendid!" he exclaimed.

"And now I wish you'd bring me home some more money tonight."

"What did you do with what I brought home last night?" he asked in some surprise.

"Oh, that's what I saved the smoking jacket money out of," she answered, "and there wasn't any left!"—Chicago Post.

Not to Be Rushed.

Bishop Littlejohn of Long Island, who died at the age of ninety, refused up to the day of his death to accept the assistance of a cadjutor bishop, declaring that he was perfectly able to perform his duties and care for his people. At a meeting of the clergy in the last year of his life Archdeacon Bryan was requested to call the meeting to order. The archdeacon arose and requested the delegates to give attention, remarking:

"The bishop wishes to say a few words."

"A few words, sir; a few words!" interjected the bishop. "I would have it understood, sir, that the bishop will say as many words as he pleases."

The Benefits of Prayer.

"Now, honestly," said the unbeliever, "have you ever been helped by prayer? Can you point to a single instance in which you can truthfully say that praying has done you the slightest service?"

"I should say I could!" replied the good old elder. "If I hadn't stopped to say my prayers the other morning I'd have caught the 7:30 train into the city, and instead of sixty-one passengers killed and injured in the wreck I'd have probably made the sixty-second!"—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Doltish Bachelor.

Boy (in butcher's shop)—My mother sent me back to let you see what a big bone there was in the pound of beef she bought last night, and she wants another pound without bones. Butcher—Tell your mother the next time I'll give you without bones I'll send her a big log for nothing.

A Remonstrance.

"I see Jones is going to write a novel."

"I never thought he had imagination enough for that."

"The demon has been! He's been making out expense accounts for nearly eleven years!"—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Her Own Ticket.

"Well, of course, I don't know how the young lady will turn out. Marriage is a lottery."

"Yes, mamma, but a girl should hardly be expected to let her mother select her ticket!"—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Cure for Sick-Headache

We had a letter the other day from a lady in the town of Boulder, Colo., that should be of interest to people who are troubled with spells of sick-headache. She writes that she had these spells about four times a week, was obliged to go to bed and remain there from 8 to 10 hours each time. Had been troubled this way for several years, and the attacks became more frequent. Doctors done her no good, she tried dieting as everybody said it was from her stomach. Seeing an advertisement of Dr. Gunn's Improved Liver Pills, which said, they cure sick-headache by removing the cause, she decided to try once more, and sent 50c. for two boxes. She said she had taken the last pill more than 4 months ago, has not had a sick spell of any kind for over 5 months. Druggists sell these pills for 25c. per box. It only takes one for a dose, they cure sick-headache every time. For sale by A. C. Marsters & Co.
