Sympathize with Russia in the present war in the Far East must have been very few among the audience that filled out of the Roseburg Theatre Tuesday night, after having looked upon a portrayal of alleged Russian life depicting brutality, the like of which was never seen before in a dramatic production in this city. "For Her Sake" was the title of the play, which in its scope embraced Russian characters of different classes and the country itself from the Polish border to the coast mines in Siberia. Of course no Russian play would be considered complete without a depiction of the horrible treatment accorded to political prisoners, and this was fully portrayed in the fourth act. It is certainly a very strong play, though not at all times fully sustained by some members of the cast.

Per month, delivered by carrier. Leave orders at Cannon's Book and Stationery Store.
