Argument Being Made in Libel Suit This Afternoon

MANY WITNESSES CALLED

Editor Testifies that "Taxpayer" is a Warm Friend, but Same He "Don't Know."

To justify in the minds of the jury the statements made in the alleged libellous articles directed against F. W. Woolley, by attempting to show that he used his position of school director as a medium to obtain business for the hardware firm to which he belongs, is the endeavor of the attorneys for the Plaintiff in the damage case against that paper which is being tried in the circuit court here. The specific transactions alleged contrary to law, are that Mr. Woolley's firm accepted a contract to install the present hot air system, in the high school building, that the firm submitted a bid for doing the plumbing work, and that they have frequently furnished supplies to both the public and high schools in this city. The Plaintiff managers assumed entire responsibility for the article referred to and would not divulge the name of its author. Therefore the hearing was devoted almost entirely to the grounds upon which the allegations of the article are said to be founded.

Among those called to the witness stand in behalf of the plaintiff Thursday afternoon were Directors F. W. Woolley and B. W. Strong and ex-Director S. C. Flint, of the Roseburg school; W. G. McPherson, of Portland, who installed the heating plant in the new high school; Contractor J. C. Snook, of Salem, who erected the building, and Judge J. J. Walton, a school director of Eugene. The defense called as witnesses A. M. Smith, a travelling salesman, who gave testimony on the quality of paint used on the high school; Miss Clara Dillard, clerk of the Roseburg school district; Architect C. H. Burger, of Albany, who drafted the plans for the building; Jos. Sykes, of the plumbing firm of Carroll and Sykes, of this city, and John Hunter, the well known local contractor.

Briefly, the trend of the efforts of the defense was toward proving that Mr. Woolley, as a director of the school, and therefore contrary to law, sold hardware necessities for the new high school building; that the school board, of which Mr. Woolley was a member, after rejecting bids on a hot water system of heating for the school, accepted a proposition from the W. G. McPherson Company, of Portland, whereby the latter was permitted to install a hot air system for heating and ventilating the school, without other persons having been given an opportunity to bid thereon, that through a transaction Mr. Woolley received a commission for installing this plant and doing plumbing work, using material from the hardware store in which Mr. Woolley is interested (that of Churchill & Woolley); that it is significant that Mr. Woolley was opposed to a hot air system of heating until after he had a conference with Mr. McPherson. In support of their allegation that Churchill and Woolley received a commission from the W. G. McPherson Company for installing the heating plant, the defense produced a contract to that effect between the parties aforesaid; but the contract appeared to have been assigned by Churchill and Woolley to the local plumbing firm of Bridges and Marsters, the defense claiming, however, that Mr. Bridges was really in the employ of Churchill and Woolley at the time.

In answer to these charges, Mr. Woolley most positively denied having received any commission, or showing unfairness to local contractors. Furthermore, he stated positively that Mr. Bridges was not in the employ of his firm when the McPherson contract was assigned over to him, nor was his firm in any way connected with the installation of the heating plant or the plumbing work. In this latter statement he was corroborated by Mr. Strong, Mr. Snook and Mr. McPherson. As to the heating plant itself, there was no dispute about its superiority, the controversy relative thereto being the manner of letting the contract, which the directors asserted was regular in all respects. As far as the evidence seemed to show the proceedings antecedent to the award of this contract was as follows: The advertisement for bids called for a hot water system and three bids were submitted therefor. When the bids were opened, Mr. McPherson, who had not submitted a bid, appeared before the board of directors with a proposition to install a hot air system for heating and ventilating, which he claimed was far superior to the proposed hot water system. He called attention to the great number of schools in which this hot air system had been installed, one of which is the Eugene High School, which he requested the directors to visit. Invoking their "right to reject any or all bids," the directors made a trip to Eugene and ascertained that the hot air system was all that Mr. McPherson claimed for it. Thereupon, without re-advertising for bids on the newly adopted system, they awarded a contract to Mr. McPherson for installing the plant in consideration of the sum of $3,000.

Jos. Sykes, one of the contractors who claims he was not given a chance to submit a bid on a hot air system, testified that he could have installed a plant as good as the one put in by McPherson for $2,800. He admitted, however, that he had had no experience with hot air plants, the one installed by McPherson being the only one he ever saw.

Miss Clara Dillard, the school district clerk, was called to the stand to testify to a number of bills for supplies furnished to the school by Churchill and Woolley while Mr. Woolley was a director.

A. M. Smith, the travelling salesman, testified that he sold to Churchill and Woolley the paint used on the high school and that it was not the best quality.

John Hunter testified that Mr. Woolley required him to pay an excessive price for inferior goods used in building the addition to the public school building, said goods coming from Churchill & Woolley's store. Mr. Hunter said he couldn't help himself, because he (Hunter) had exceeded the limit of time allowed for the construction of the addition by 15 days, which meant a loss of $100 under a forfeiture clause in the contract, and that Mr. Woolley saw that this clause was not enforced. But Mr. Hunter spoiled all the effect of his testimony by admitting under cross examination that he had received his money from the school board fully a year before he settled with Mr. Woolley for the supplies bought.

TODAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

The proceedings in the Woolley-Plaintiff damage suit reached a dramatic climax in the circuit court this morning when W. C. Conner, subordinate manager of the paper, was asked on the witness stand to give the real name of "Taxpayer," over whose signature appeared the articles in the paper attacking Mr. Woolley. Previous to this moment, Mr. Conner acknowledged that "Taxpayer" was a "warm, personal friend" of his.

"Who is 'taxpayer'?" asked Mr. Rice, one of Mr. Woolley's attorneys, who was conducting the cross examination.

Counsel for the defense objected, and brief arguments on both sides followed. Judge Hamilton pondered a little longer than usual and a hush of expectancy fell over the court room. During this interval Attorney Rice turned around in his chair and faced Mr. A. C. Marsters, the reputed chief owner and director of the Plaintiff, who sat on one of the front benches in the room. Mr. Rice's action was apparently so purposely deliberate that it was contagious, the spectators turning their gaze from Mr. Conner, whoidgetted about in his chair, and resting it upon Mr. Marsters as if expecting an answer from him instead. Mr. Marsters became extremely embarrassed and turned very red in the face. He was relieved in a moment, however, by Judge Hamilton, who ruled that Mr. Conner should answer the question as to "Taxpayer's" identity.

"I—I didn't see the articles written," hesitatingly replied Mr. Conner.

"Well, who handed in the articles for publication?" asked Mr. Rice.

"I don't know," said Mr. Conner.

"Why you just stated that 'Taxpayer' was a 'warm, personal friend' of yours," insisted Mr. Rice; "you don't mean to say you don't know who he is?"

"Well, I can't swear that he wrote the article because I didn't see him do it," replied Mr. Conner.

Mr. Rice attempted to get a direct answer from the witness, but the ruling of the court prevented. Mr. Conner was then excused and a look of relief became visible on several faces in the court room.

Mr. Marsters succeeded Mr. Conner on the stand. He gave "expert" testimony in regard to the oil used in the paint on the high school building, claiming it was inferior quality. The oil, he said, was furnished by Churchill & Woolley, along with other supplies, which statement Mr. Woolley made no attempt to deny.

J. M. Bridges, of the plumbing firm of Bridges & Marsters, testified that his firm, and not Churchill & Woolley, received the money for doing the plumbing work and installing the heating plant in the new high school. This work was originally awarded to Churchill and Woolley under a contract with the McPherson Company, which furnished the plant. The contract was assigned to Bridges & Marsters on Jan. 24, 1904, but the date on which it was drawn up was shown to be November 22, 1903, at which time Mr. Bridges was in the employ of Churchill and Woolley. Mr. Bridges stated also that while he was in the employ of Churchill & Woolley that firm submitted a bid for doing the plumbing work on the High School building.

Mr. F. H. Rogers, a manager of the Plaintiff, testified briefly at the opening of the case and produced copies of the paper containing the alleged libellous articles.

Both sides finished the introduction of testimony at noon and this afternoon arguments are in progress before the jury.

NO DRINKS FOR VOTERS.

Smith Has Bill to Cut Down Electioneering Privileges.

SALEM, Or., Jan. 20.—Representative "Bob" Smith, of Josephine, has come out with another party-election measure, a former one having been relegated to indefinite postponement. This one is taken from the Kansas law, and makes it unlawful for any candidate or campaign manager to employ cigars or drinks in inducing electors to vote for him, or to provide carriages or other means to keep them away. A statement is required to be made of all campaign expenditures. Other measures introduced by the Representative from Josephine are: Making an appeal in the case of a man sentenced to be hanged lie as a stay of proceedings; providing a penalty for people who deceive hotelkeepers into giving accommodations; to require 30 days' notice of the consent of the City Council before removing fire hydrants on the part of water companies.

TO REPUND COUNTY DEBTS.

Representative Smith, of Josephine, today announced that he would next Monday introduce a bill authorizing the issuance by the state of bonds in amount not to exceed $5,000,000, upon 2 per cent of the taxable property of the state.

The bill will practically provide for the refunding by counties, which desire to take advantage of the act, of their present indebtedness bearing 8 per cent interest to 3 per cent, the refunded amounts to go into a road fund for immediate use. The bill provides that it is optional with counties to receive the benefit, and only such accepting the funds so raised will be taxed to pay the interest and principal.

THOMAS W. LAWSON.

MILTON'S FOR A NEW STOMACH
One of the greatest American millionaires once said to his physician, "A million dollars, Doctor, for a new stomach," and then the sick man groaned and turned away. One of a man's greatest pleasures is that born of a keen appetite, vigorous digestion and a good sleep, and this belongs to many a great fellow who is lying on a small mat on the sofa, without a stomach that can digest the good things of the table because his stomach is weak. Without a healthy stomach and a good digestion, our blood is thin, our nerves and our heart do not do their duty, and man is miserable and unhappy. In this condition man is prey to the germs of influenza, consumption, malaria and all the ills that he is heir to. Consumption can be treated by natural methods which are as slow as nature is possible.

Dr. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician of the "Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute," at Buffalo, N. Y., years ago succeeded this disease, and after a long period of experiment discovered certain roots and herbs which were nature's remedies, and succeeded in putting them up in a form that would be easily absorbed and ready to use. This he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It gives no false stimulation because it contains no alcohol and no opium. It helps digestion and the assimilation of such elements in the food as are required for the blood. Instead of a cold liver oil, against which the already sensitive stomach will declare open rebellion, this tonic has a purifying action upon the sensitive stomach and gives in the blood the food elements the tissues require. It maintains the patient's nutrition by enabling him to eat, retain, digest and assimilate nutritious food. It overcomes gastric irritability and symptoms of indigestion, and in this way fever, night-sweats, headaches, etc., are done away with. It fortifies the body against the germs of consumption, grip and malaria, and it builds up the tissues and puts on healthy flesh.

When the druggist says he has something that is "just as good" as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, he says so because he hopes to make a better profit, but his own mixture have not stood the test of long experience nor had the success that Dr. Pierce's medicines have had.
