The rainfall of Friday night and this morning will doubtless prove of vast benefit to crops of nearly all kinds. Grains, fruits and gardens will greatly increase their yields on account of this welcome addition of needed moisture. Possibly some hay which is now cut may be damaged if the showers should continue, but the benefits in other lines will be so far greater that any possible loss in that line will be completely overshadowed. The present rains assure excellent crops throughout Western Oregon and that means a prosperous season for everybody.
