DEMOCRACY'S FORMER STAND-AND-BEARERS.

WASHINGTON, July 8.—Today's convention in Denver is properly that of the country's oldest political party, since the present Democratic party claims to be the lineal descendant of the organization founded by Thomas Jefferson in his day...

Conventions held since that time have resulted in the selection of the following candidates for president and vice president.

- June 2, 1856—Charles Sumner, Douglas and Johnson. June 18, 1860—Baltimore, Douglas and Johnson. June 11, 1860—Richmond, Breckinridge and Lane. June 8, 1860—Baltimore, Breckinridge and Lane. August 29, 1864—McClellan and Pendleton. July 4, 1868—New York, Seymour and Blair. July 6, 1872—Baltimore, Greeley and Brown. July 27, 1876—St. Louis, Tilden and Hendricks. July 22, 1880—Cincinnati, Hancock and English. July 8, 1884—Chicago, Cleveland and Hendricks. July 5, 1888—St. Louis, Cleveland and Thurman. June 21, 1892—Chicago, Cleveland and Stevenson. July 7, 1896—Chicago, Bryan and Sewell. July 4, 1900—Kansas City, Mr. Bryan and Stevenson. July 6, 1904—Parker and Davis.

Production of Precious Stones in the United States in 1907.

The total value of the precious stones produced in the United States during 1907 is placed by the Geological Survey at $471,300, as compared with $208,000 in 1906. This great increase is due chiefly to a very large output of sapphire in Montana, of both the blue and the variegated variety.

A new gem mineral—benitoite—has been added to the list of known precious stones. This is a titanate of barium, having a blue color and a high refractive index.

Women Who Wear Well.

It is astonishing how great a change a few years of married life often make in the appearance and disposition of many women. The freshness, the charm, the brilliancy vanish like the bloom from a peach which is rudely handled.

As surely as the general health suffers when there is derangement of the health of the delicate woman's organs, so surely when these organs are established in health the face and mind will witness a million women have found health and happiness in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

For nursing mothers, or for those broken down in health by too frequent bearing of children, also for the expectant mothers, to prepare the system for the coming of baby and making its advent easy and almost painless, there is no medicine quite so good as Favorite Prescription.

The Early Life of W. J. Bryan

His Birthplace, Salem, N.

By ROBERTUS LOVE. (Copyright, 1906, by Robertus Love.) He has spoken face to face beyond all question to more heroes than has any other man in the world's history.

He was one who traveled with William Jennings Bryan during the presidential campaign of 1896 and 1900, and there is no doubt as to the truth of the statement.

The purpose of this article is briefly to sketch the life of Mr. Bryan up to the age of thirty-six, when he was nominated by the Democratic party for the presidency of the United States.

The town of Salem, Ill., is the birthplace of Bryan. Judge Silas L. Bryan, a substantial, intellectual settler from Virginia, was his father. Maria Elizabeth Jennings was his mother's maiden name.

The child was born March 19, 1856. Judge Bryan lived on a farm near the edge of town. He had nine children, of whom William Jennings is the fourth.

He was nurtured by wholesome and beautiful environment in boyhood. Bryan attended the public schools in Salem until he was fifteen, when he entered Whipple academy at Jacksonville, Ill.

He was graduated with honors at the age of twenty-one. During his college course his oratorical abilities made him prominent in middle western collegiate life. He won the honor of representing his school in the state contest of college orators.

He won that contest and represented Illinois in 1881 at the interstate oratorical contest, held at Galesburg, Ill., where he achieved second honors. He was class orator at graduation.

Jacksonville has a female seminary. In that school Miss Mary E. Baird was a student while young Bryan was in Illinois college. She was from Perry, Ill., and was of excellent family and an ambitious student.

When President Cleveland called an extra session of congress in the summer of 1893 to push through the repeal of the Sherman silver bullion purchase act of 1890, the Democratic president of the old school unwillingly gave to the man of destiny in the new school of Democracy an altitudinous stepping stone toward the presidency.

Bryan declined a renomination for congress in 1894 and became editor of the Omaha World-Herald. He wanted to go to the United States senate. The World-Herald business office made a contract to run daily on the editorial page two columns of "stuff" paid for by Republicans, which was identical to Bryan's prospects.

the party leaders offered him the nomination for the lieutenant governorship of Nebraska. He declined the offer, but made a stumping campaign for the ticket throughout the state.

The next year, 1890, the young Democracy thrust upon the young Democratic nominee the nomination for congressman from the First district. J. Sterling Morton, who in his time was father of Arbor day and a member of President Cleveland's cabinet, had been defeated in the race for congress from that district in 1888 by a Republican majority of more than 3,000 votes.

So at thirty Bryan was chosen to the national house of representatives. He delivered his first speech in the house the 12th of March, 1892, on the subject of free wool. Senator Burrows of Michigan, temporary chairman of the year's Republican national convention, declared that it was the best speech on the tariff he ever had heard.

In the meantime Mr. Bryan was happy at home with his little family, the helpful wife and three children. The children now are grown up. Ruth is Mrs. William H. Leavitt and has made her father a grandfather. William junior is eighteen, and Miss Grace is a budding belle of seventeen years.

Young Mrs. Leavitt herself is something of a politician. She has been elected a delegate to the Democratic state convention in Colorado, her home being in Denver. Young William is a student in the Nebraska State university at Lincoln. Miss Grace, who in the event of her father's election to the presidency will become "the young lady of the White House," is at home with her estimable mother on the Bryan farm near Lincoln, known as "Fairview" where the head of the family some years ago built a handsome residence.

When in 1896 the Republican convention which nominated McKinley for president met in St. Louis, William J. Bryan held no office whatever. He still had a connection with the Omaha paper, and he went to St. Louis as a press correspondent. At the Platters hotel the clerk looked over the plainly garbed young man who signed "W. J. Bryan" on the register and made him pay in advance. The clerk put Bryan in a room with seven Republicans. Under date of June 16 a correspondent of the New York Tribune sent to his paper from St. Louis this highly interesting paragraph:

Ex-Congressman William J. Bryan, the leader of the free silver wing of the Nebraska Democracy, was one of yesterday's arrivals. The appearance of Mr. Bryan in a hotel corridor in consultation with several Republicans from free silver states of the far west excited much comment. In response to a question concerning his mission Mr. Bryan remarked: "I have nothing to say now except that these gentlemen and I will be found next November voting the same ticket."

Senator Henry M. Teller of Colorado and others were the free silver Republican leaders indicated by the Tribune correspondent. It was an accurate prediction by Mr. Bryan that they would be voting the same ticket with him in November, for they walked out of the Republican national convention when the gold standard platform was adopted and aligned themselves with the free silver Democracy.

But neither the New York correspondent nor the free silver seceders nor the Nebraska correspondent and free silver leader himself could foretell that the seceders would vote for William Jennings Bryan as the presidential candidate on the ticket which was to be nominated at Chicago a few weeks later.

WOULD TAX CHURCH PROPERTY

Chicago Minister Advocates Such a Measure.

CHICAGO, July 6.—Taxation of church property was advocated strongly by the Rev. Q. H. Harnly yesterday in a sermon in the Austin Baptist church.

"The Crutch of Jesus Christ," said the pastor, "will never be rendered unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's until she has paid her full quota of taxes on all property she possesses. The state and local governments are supported by taxes assessed upon property. The rate of tax depends upon the amount of property assessed. The more property in a taxing district, the lower the rate. To exempt no property in a taxing district is to lower the rate. To exempt property is to increase the rate.

"Now there are millions of dollars worth of church property that is exempt from tax. The burden of tax upon the remaining property therefore, must be increased to make up the difference and thus citizens who may have no interest whatever in the church and who may not care to labor toward its work are compelled indirectly to do so."
