Chronic Diarrhoea Relieved.

Mr. Edward E. Henry, with the United States Express Co., Chicago, writes: "Our general superintendent, Mr. Quick, handed me a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy some time ago to check an attack of the old chronic diarrhoea. I have used it since that time and cured many on our trains who have been sick. I am an old soldier who served with Rutherford B. Hayes and William McKinley four years in the 23rd Ohio Regiment, and have no ailment except chronic diarrhoea which this remedy stops at once." For sale by Hamilton Drug Co.

FAVORS GROWING MORE HOGS. A recent bulletin issued by the Oregon Agricultural college says: There is no branch of animal husbandry in a grain growing section that will give quicker, surer, or larger returns than will hogs. Despite this fact, Oregon for a number of years has utterly failed to produce enough pork products to supply the home demand. It is certainly a strange anomaly that train loads of Nebraska fed hogs are brought past one of the best hog producing sections of the continent. These hogs can be grown and finished for the market on field peas, or upon wheat and barley. It has been demonstrated by farmers in this section that hogs can be profitably grown on wheat pasture during the summer. Experimental feeding has shown that three and one-half pounds of wheat will produce a gain of one pound of live weight on a hog fattened for bacon. For a longer period of fattening so as to secure a large type of hog, more grain will be required. The heavier larded hog will require about 450 pounds of wheat for 100 pounds gain in live weight. This at 5 1/2 cents per pound would bring to the grower 73 cents per bushel for his wheat. The bacon type would take less wheat because the finishing will be done in shorter time, hence the less grain consumed per pound gain. For 100-pound gains in this type of a hog it will require about 250 pounds of wheat. This at 5 1/2 cents per pound will return to the grower 94 cents per bushel for his wheat. If the young hogs are mainly grown on pasture, such as alfalfa, rape, peas or winter grains sown in the spring, they can be grown to a fattening stage for 3 1/2 cents per pound. The pigs should be farrowed early in the spring and permitted to run with their dams on pasture until they are at least two months old. In the meantime they should be taught to eat a small supplemental grain feed. After this he will make a satisfactory growth on good pasture. By fall this pig should weigh 125 pounds, costing 3 1/2 cents per pound. This includes the cost of supplemental grain fed and the value of the pasture. The pig is then finished for market, and during this process consumes 350 pounds of wheat and makes an additional 100 pounds in weight gain. The cost of growing the pig is $4.37, but after consuming 350 pounds of wheat he weighs 225 pounds worth 5 1/2 cents a pound, or represents a value of $12.37, thus returning to the grower for his wheat $8, or $1.37 per bushel. Equally good results can be secured from pens. The hogs can harvest these themselves. It is believed that a quarter section of good wheat land sown to peas would fatten 250 hogs worth $2,000 and at the same time carry over the breeding stock. It may be well to state that the younger the pig the greater gains are secured for the food consumed. Also the shorter the period of fattening the great gains for food consumed. This is largely the reason why the bacon type is the more desirable to grow. Furthermore, peas and wheat, or peas and barley produce the very best quality of bacon hog. In fact the wheat, barley and pea-fed hog will command a premium over the corn-fed hog in any discriminating market.

A HUMAN MACHINE. He Was Able to Correct a Language He Did Not Understand. When Max Muller was preparing the edition of the Higeveda he had, so the story goes, an illustration of the instinctive wisdom of the compositor. In providing the manuscript for about 5,000 sheets of print the author naturally tripped from time to time. Whenever he did trip, there on his proof was the error queried in a careful hand. Surely, he thought, some unknown scholar in the university must be overlooking his proofs with kindly interest and making the corrections for him. Inquiry showed that this was not the fact. The corrections were the corrections of the man who set up the type. "Did this man, then, know Sanskrit?" Muller asked. Not a bit of it. Use and wont enabled him to detect the errors as a hungry child detects a cooking dinner. The discovery originated through his arm rather than from any intellectual doubt, and that arm was palsied! This printer had sustained an accident, leaving him with an arm partly paralyzed, and as this made him slower with his setting his masters turned him on to Sanskrit, with which he had had no previous acquaintance. He had to learn upward of 300 types for the work, but he learned them and accustomed himself to the work. Now, many of the letters in Sanskrit cannot follow each other or, if they do, must be modified. In writing Muller sometimes forgot these modifications, but they were all marked on the proof. Muller was so interested that he sought out the printer to ask him how he was able to correct a language which he did not understand. The explanation was remarkable: "You see, sir, my arm gets into a regular swing from one compartment of types to another, and there are movements that never occur. So if I suddenly have to take up types which entail a new movement I feel it and put a query." What a dog's life the "nu spelling" or Artemus Ward's, which is the same thing, would have caused that marvelous human machine—St. James' Gazette.
