STATE BUILDING RAILROAD.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Sept. 10.—A practical experiment in railroad construction and operation has been undertaken by the state of Texas. The state is building a line of railway from Palestine to the penitentiary at Rusk. About 15 miles of the track has been completed, and work on the remaining 14 miles is being rapidly pushed. The state officials say they expect to learn by actual construction and operation the immediate cost of railway building and running, and that public information so obtained with regarding bookkeeping will be a basis of argument for future railroad rates. The fact that the state operates iron works at Rusk gives a financial reason for this government ownership of a railroad.

Dr. Finn's Testimony Interesting.

FOR THE CHILDREN

The Ermine and the Ptarmigan.
Most children have all heard paraps of the queer way in which the little animal called the ermine changes its coat according to the season, being pure white in winter, but a reddish brown in summer. This change is what naturalists call protective coloration—that is to say, it is white in winter because its surroundings are white, being covered with snow, and it is brown in summer because its surroundings are then brown, and being the color of its surroundings, it can more easily hide itself from its enemies. There are many similar cases in nature, one of which a naturalist recently called special attention to—that of the bird called the ptarmigan. It puts on a white dress in winter, but by a seeming inconsistency it then has a black tail. Now, one would think that its black tail would prevent its hiding itself in a snow field, but see how beautifully nature works. When the bird crouches on the snow, it looks like a little lump such as may be seen in every snow field, but it must be remembered that every snow hump casts a dark shadow, and the bird's black tail imitates that shadow.

My House, Your House.

The players sit around a table, in the middle of which is a circle about five inches in diameter. The circle may be drawn with chalk or made of paper. A slip noose is made at one end of a cord about a yard long, and the other end is tied to a cane. One of the players holds the cane, and the slip noose is laid around the chalk circle. When he says "My house" each of the other players must touch the tip of the forefinger to the table inside the circle, and when he says "Your house" each must withdraw his finger and place it on the table in front of him.

The commands "My house," "Your house," may be repeated as fast as the speaker pleases and in any order he may choose. Any one who does not put his finger in the circle at the command "My house" or who takes it out except at the command "Your house" must pay a forfeit. When the player with the cane says "Your house" he is allowed to tighten the noose quickly, trying to catch any fingers that remain in the circle. If he succeeds the person whose finger is caught must take the cane, and the game goes on.

Dog and Kitten.

A correspondent sends to the London Spectator the following anecdote:
The servant man of a family took a kitten to a pond with the intention of drowning it. The master's dog went with him, and when the kitten was thrown into the water the dog sprang in and brought it back to land.

A second time the man threw it in, and again the dog rescued it, and when for the third time the servant tried to drown it the dog, as resolute to save the little life as the man was to destroy it, swam with it to the other side of the pond, ran all the way home with it and deposited it before the kitchen fire.

From that time the dog kept constant watch over the kitten. The two were inseparable, even sharing the same bed.

A Russian Game.

Swayka is a game played with an iron pin eight or nine inches long and any number of iron rings, varying in diameter from two inches to one foot. The pin, which is called the swayka (its name is Russian) is so sharp that it will stick upright when thrown either at the ground or a board floor. The rings are tossed on the ground in any order, and the players try to throw the swayka so that it will stick upright within one of them. The object is to place it in each one of the rings in order. Game may be counted by fixing upon a number of points for each ring, according to its size. The smaller rings, being more difficult, should count the highest. Any number agreed upon could be the limit for a game.

A Homemade Harp.

Take a piece of wood six and a half inches long and two inches wide and cut five little slits at each end. Then take a piece of wood one and three-quarters inches long and a half inch high. Buy a long piece of rubber, take one end of the rubber, pull it into one of the slits and when you see that you have enough to stretch from one of the slits to the other then cut it and fasten the other end in the opposite slit. Make and adjust four more of these pieces and then take the small piece of wood and put it under the strings and you'll have your harp. It can be tuned by making the strings tighter or looser, and then you can play.

Conundrums.

Why mustn't you have a short walking stick? Because it can never be long to you.
What is it which while it is yours alone is used more by other people than by yourself? Your name.
What is it we all like to have, but never like to keep? A good appetite.
What is that which is neither flesh nor bone and yet has four fingers and a thumb? A glove.

Waiting For Dinner.

When one is very hungry
It's hard to wait, I know,
For minutes seem like hours,
And the clock is always slow.
When he's time to play a game,
You jump at five and wait,
When mother says: "Be patient,
The wait is never late."
10, but who else is hungry
To think of other things,
To wait before you know it
The oil for dinner rings.
—St. Nicholas.

FACTS FROM THE LIFE OF MAN.

The Humorist's View of It.

Man that is born of his parents is of few days and full of microbes. He goes to school when a youngster and geteth the elbow of his pants padded for something that he did not do until he is sick at heart. He groweth up like a Chinese thistle in the back yard and soon reaches the age when he is composed to a large extent of feet, freckles and an appetite for pie.

About the time he gets too long for short trousers and too short still for long ones, he goeth away to a college, learneth to monkey with a $3 mandolin and to play at whiskey poker. He cometh home a bigger fool than when he went away and marrieth a sweet young thing whose pa is supposed to be wealthy but whom he subsequently ascertaineth couldn't buy a prize rooster at a county fair. He worrieth himself from year to year, gradually acquiring off-springs and debts until the former resembles a Sunday school class just before Christmas, and the latter like the assets of a bankrupt. He fretteth through the days and lieth awake nights trying to figure out how to keep himself and dependent population out of the poorhouse. Efforts are rewarded by having his daughters run away and get married, and bring him home another son-in-law every few days to feast at his board. His sons grow up and call him governor and set him back a five-spot every day or two. About the time he has acquired enough to make it worth while for his heirs to quarrel over, he becomes exultant and is hustled off before he has had time to talk with his family. His sons blow in his estate on bad whiskey and plug hats and his wife puts on the finishing touches to his career by marrying the hired man and cutting a wide swath with his insurance money.

Verily, the way of the transgressor is hard and his first name is man.—Ex.
