

THE HANDLING OF WINTER APPLS.

By Prof. H. E. Van Deman.

The time is almost at hand when apple gathering will be the main work on the fruit farms and on many ordinary farms, too, for almost every good farm has apples to gather and store for winter use.

Gathering.—The special time when each variety is in the proper condition to gather is a very serious question. Not only do the varieties differ but the seasons as well, so that no set rule can be laid down that will always apply with good effect.

There have been very careful experiments conducted for several years in succession to determine at what stage of maturity, as indicated by color, where this is possible, apple would keep the best.

Apples that were gathered when quite immature or even moderately so, have often been badly affected with brown rot.

If apples are left until they are fully ripe, so as to be good eaters before they are gathered, they will not keep well.

Therefore, the lesson is, allow winter apples to get good color before gathering and yet not let them become fully ripe.

Storing.—Another important point about handling winter apples is the storing. That they should be rushed from the trees to the storage room is the really vital point.

Experiments have been made with the greatest care to determine the facts as they really exist and they have proved that even a few days' delay in warm air off the trees has a materially injurious effect.

The temperature at which apples keep best is 32 degrees Fahrenheit. This is just the freezing point for water and it might be thought that apples will freeze and be injured but they will not.

Like a young bird and gulp down what ever food or medicine may be offered you do you want to know something of the signs and character of that which you take into your stomach whether as food or medicine?

Most intelligent and sensible people nowadays insist on knowing what they employ whether as food or as medicine. Dr. Fetter believes they have a perfect right to insist on such knowledge.

For the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses, irregularities and derangements giving rise to frequent headaches, back ache, dragging-down pain or distress in lower abdominal or pelvic region, accompanied, sometimes, with a debilitating pelvic catarrhal drain and various symptoms of weakness, Dr. Fetter's Favorite Prescription is a most efficient remedy.

It is equally effective in curing painful periods, in giving strength to nursing mothers and in preventing the return of the expiring mother, for baby's coming thus rendering the mother safe and comfortable.

It is also a soothing and invigorating agent in all cases of nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuritis, hysteria, spasms, chronic or acute, and other distressing nervous symptoms.

It is also a most potent strengthening tonic to the general system and to the organs directly feminine in particular.

A host of medical authorities of all the several schools of practice, physicians of all the several continents of what is known as "Favorite Prescription" made for the cure of the diseases for which it is so famous.

Grading.—Do not forget that very much depends on the grading of apples, from the commercial or paying standpoint. It never pays to fall to sort; and the closer the sorting is done the better.

Selling.—It is usually best to sell in the fall and not to run the risk of storing for future prices. There is always a swarm of speculators who are doing that business to a finish. Every fruit grower who stores his apples joins the number of those who are "gambling in futures." Or that may be putting it unfairly, for he is only holding what is his own for what he hopes may be better prices. But it is a matter of exceeding doubt, and the loss from decay, shrinkage, cost of storage and the use of the worth of the apples usually more than offsets the profit. If a good or even a fair price is offered, sell and have no more work or worry with the crop.

I think it is a good plan to sell to special customers whenever possible. Of course, there must be specially good apples to sell and such will usually bring special prices. This can be done in several ways. By truthful and tastefully got up circulars and advertisements to supply certain varieties and guaranteeing all that is sold to be as stated is one good way.

By personal solicitations, using samples, one can often secure trade from people who are able to buy good things. But putting up one fruit and getting a small start at selling is the best way of all to sell it. One pleased customer tells others and the fruit sells itself.—Green's Fruit Grower.

MAY GET ARTILLERY CORPS. Coos Bay has no Means of Defense. Although Easily Approached.

PORTLAND, Or., Oct. 2.—Coos Bay may be the headquarters for an artillery company. Adjutant-General Finzer, of the Oregon National Guard, is to visit the Coos Bay country to look over the situation, and if he finds conditions as described, he may recommend the establishment of an artillery company at that point.

Coos Bay, although on the coast and easily approached by the best of an enemy, has no fortifications or other means of defense. It is urged that an artillery company be organized and instructed, to serve as the nucleus of coast defenders in time of war.
