MONMOUTH, Ill., Oct. 23.—The Presbyterian synod of Illinois here yesterday passed resolutions urging the defeat of Speaker Cannon of the national house of representatives, who is seeking re-election.

CRYING FOR HELP.

Lots of it in Roseburg, But Daily Growing Less.

The kidneys cry for help. Not an organ in the whole body so delicately constructed. Not one so important to health. The kidneys are the filters of the blood. When they fail the blood becomes foul and poisonous. There can be no health where there is poisoned blood. Backache is one of the first indications of kidney trouble. It is the kidney's cry for help. Heed it. Doan's Kidney Pills are what is wanted. Are just what overworked kidneys need. They strengthen and invigorate the kidneys; help them to do their work; never fail to cure any case of kidney disease. Read the proof from a Roseburg citizen: G. W. Kezar, Film St., near North End, Roseburg, Ore., says: "I am glad to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills as from my own experience I can say that they can be depended on to relieve backache and other symptoms of kidney trouble. I got the remedy when suffering an attack of this kind and they quickly relieved me." For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Forster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

"Generally debilitated for years. Had sick headaches, lacked ambition, was worn-out and all run-down. But Burdock Blood Bitters made me a well woman."—Mrs. Chan, Frettoy, Moosup, Conn.

BUILDING UP OREGON.

the government, Mr. Bourne asked Mr. Crawford whether, in case of victory by the government, the land would be declared forfeited and thrown into the forest reserves or ordered placed on the market at once by the railroad company and sold at $2.50 per acre. Mr. Crawford replied that the latter is more probable. He volunteered no opinion as to the rights of persons who have bought more of the grant than the terms allow (150 acres to any one person), popularly referred to as "innocent purchasers;" but he considered it devolving upon the courts to decide as to whether they are bona fide settlers.

"I had a talk with Mr. Townsend, one of the government's attorneys," said Mr. Crawford, "regarding the status of a large number of persons who had filed applications for tracts in the land grant and to the rights of persons who have bought more of the grant than the terms allow (150 acres to any one person), popularly referred to as 'innocent purchasers;' but he considered it devolving upon the courts to decide as to whether they are bona fide settlers."

Senator Bourne, with a view to learning the sentiment of the congress, then asked for a vote on the question of which of these two things was desired: Prosecution of the present suit to a finish, delaying the development of the state for several years, with a chance of ultimate defeat, or an early compromise between the government and the O. & C. R., allowing the latter to sell the land for a stated price, in excess of $2.50 if necessary, but not so high as to be discriminative or prohibitive. One man in the audience declared with emphasis that he stood for a "fight," and vigorous handclapping followed. This only started matters, however.

Frank E. Alley contended that the congress was not in a position to vote intelligently upon the question because of the complex situation and, further, for the reason that the future forestry policy of the government was unknown at the present time. He expressed the belief, however, that the state at large, as well as individuals would be better off if the O. & C. R. were allowed to sell off its lands at a reasonable figure. This, he said, would give tremendous impetus to the lumbering industry of the state and increase the volume of money correspondingly. "It's better to compromise than to risk loss through a law suit," was his final remark. "Booster" Zacher wanted to know if the railroad company would have to pay taxes on its holdings if deprived of its control during the pendency of the suit. Mr. Crawford answered the question in the affirmative.

John H. Hartog, the Eugene "booster," thought it would be a great mistake to take the vote. He said that experience had taught him that a compromise was safer than a contest.

Hon. Ringer Hermann did not think the congress had anything to do with the question propounded by Mr. Bourne, because the courts were handling the matter and should not be interfered with. "As to Senator Bourne wishing to learn the sentiment of the people of the state, I think his constituency has but one opinion: The railroad company agreed to sell this land for $2.50 an acre and it should be made to comply with that obligation. (applause). That's all the people ask. The real question is: Are those lands going to be sold according to that contract, or are they not?"

Judge J. W. Hamilton thought, like Mr. Alley and Mr. Hartog, that the vote asked for by Mr. Bourne should not be taken. His reason was that such an expression, coming from a representative body of this character, would become an official expression and might have serious effect.

Mr. Alley finally suggested that, instead of a vote being taken, those who had an opinion on the matter go to Mr. Bourne personally and express it. This idea met with favor from Chairman Hofer and he ruled accordingly.

Discrimination. One of the features of Friday afternoon's session was the speech of Mr. Hermann advocating federal aid in the building of good roads, and his remarks were responsible for the incorporation of that idea in the resolution on that subject. "I contend that it is the duty of the federal government to aid in the building of highways," said Mr. Hermann. "Something like $60,000,000 in have been appropriated for the improvement of the waterways of the nation, but the amount of money given by congress for building highways has been comparatively insignificant. Of late years, however, a generous sentiment toward good roads has developed in congress, and this body should pass a resolution, asking congress for aid in the projects before us. Congress, as well as the State of Oregon, should appropriate $500,000 for the construction of our roads. In soliciting this help you will not be amiss, but treading in the footsteps of other states." (Great applause.)

At Friday evening's session, the Development Congress, Col. Hofer again presided. After a few introductory remarks by the chairman, a vocal trio was rendered by Misses Black, Bridges and Black, with Miss Elsie Benedict at the piano. An encore was graciously responded to. After announcements for Saturday's sessions, President P. L. Campbell, of the University of Oregon was introduced as the speaker of the evening.

Pres. Campbell's Address. "Higher Standards in the Public Schools" was the subject of President Campbell's address. He commended Roseburg on the advancement of its high school work and the excellent students sent from here to the U. of O. He also thanked the Roseburg people for their substantial encouragement of the University during its struggle of last winter and spring when the state appropriation of $125,000 for its support was held up under the referendum law.

As to boosting, that was the especial forte of Hon. John Hartog, of Eugene, who was in the audience. Speaking of great things in Oregon, and especially the big timber in Lane county, he said Mr. Hartog could almost lead you to believe the Lane county trees are so high that their tops are covered with perpetual snow.

The spirit of development has been gradually permeating Oregon for some years past. Ideas and plans are the first essential, and then a combined effort is needed to work out these plans. Get in mind a picture of what you want and then work for its realization. With the many natural advantages existing in Oregon, life here is comparatively easy for its inhabitants. Therefore, it has not been easy to get an active movement started to make conditions better. A vast increase in wealth in this state is inevitable. The United States has reached a point where its greatness is expressed in billions. What are now regarded as necessities of life were not long ago deemed as luxuries. Within the next 20, 30 or 40 years, Pres. Campbell predicts that this country will realize a development now scarcely dreamed of.

Intellectual culture is declared to be the prime factor of all development work. Therefore we need education in a broad way. Early in the nineteenth century Daniel Webster declared that the supreme question in this country is popular education. Make men and women capable of doing work of the highest class, if you would have your country advance. The greatest wealth of any community is its boys and girls. Educate them well. Even the factories and railroads are beginning to require at least a high school education for their employees. Modern requirements demand that more thought, energy and means be put into our educational system.

Some means should be devised whereby the backwoods districts should have as many months of school each year as the towns, and also competent teachers. There is no higher or finer art than teaching and every teacher should have broad educational as well as technical training. Our high school districts may procure high school graduates by the combining into high school districts of several regularly organized public school districts under the present laws. Industrial training is also essential. For this purpose every county may well establish an agricultural experiment station for the benefit of the growing youth. Better roads, better schools and a broader education of the general public are necessary for the development of our country, as it should and will be done.

Following President Campbell's address, John Hartog, the Eugene booster, gave a brief but appropriate talk along development lines.

Enjoyable Banquet. After the close of the regular evening program at the Armory, the members of the Roseburg Commercial Club and the visitors in attendance from abroad, were the guests of the Ladies of the Roseburg Commercial Club at a banquet served at the Masonic hall. The banquet room and tables were very tastefully decorated with roses, vines and autumn leaves, and the viands served were delicious.

Secy. F. E. Alley, of the Roseburg Commercial Club, presided as toastmaster and in a most felicitous manner introduced the several speakers, who each responded briefly. The first was Hon. B. L. Eddy, vice-president of the Club, who responded to the toast, "Our Visitors." He expressed the gratification of the Club at having present at this Development Congress these distinguished speakers from other parts of the state and thanked the ladies for their splendid part in this entertainment. Work in progressive and development lines was also touched upon in a very appropriate way.

Col. E. Hofer, of Salem, responded in his usual happy manner and included the relation of some amusing experiences in his travels over the state during the past three or four years in the promotion of development work.

Atty. Gen. A. M. Crawford told of some of the reasons why the S. P. Co. will not build any more railroads for the development of this state until compelled by the surrounding circumstances and the competition of other roads to do so. In order to accelerate that competition he advocates an amendment to the state constitution permitting new and independent lines of railroad to be exempt from taxation for a period of five years after they are built. This would cost nothing to the people of the state and would doubtless add largely to the development of new roads and new commercial districts within a few years.

Hon. John Hartog, the booster for the Eugene Commercial Club, spoke on promotion work. Citing Eugene as an example, he said about $7000 had been spent by the people of that city purely for promotion work within the past ten months. About three-fourths of that sum had been spent at home. During that period property values in Eugene had increased from 50 to 100 per cent and rentals of buildings had increased from 100 to 300 per cent. Last year's assessed valuations in the city were about $3,570,000. This year the valuations will be about $1,750,000 higher than that. The most important feature of promotion work in any town or county is harmony of action. The booster has no standing whatever in a progressive community. United action will bring returns of 1000 per cent on the investment.

Atty. Louis E. Bean, formerly a resident of Roseburg, but now of Eugene, added some very felicitous remarks along the line of progress and good will in our state's advancement. Every banqueter was presented with a Roseburg rose as a boutonniere and everyone present pronounced the occasion a very enjoyable one and which augurs well for Roseburg as one of the live and growing cities of the state.

Charged with fishing inside of 600 feet from the dam across the South Umpqua river in south Roseburg, contrary to law, Burr Jones was arraigned this afternoon and given until Monday morning, at 10 o'clock, to plead. The private prosecutor is Deputy Warden E. G. Hodson. Three other cases of a similar nature have also appeared in court, all of the defendants being boys. Lode Stancliff, aged 18 years, paid a fine of $5 this afternoon, and Clyde Speck, aged 15, paid a similar amount. Joseph Denna, aged 12 years, was allowed to go on a promise of good behavior. Speck and Denna stated in extenuation of their act that they had seen older persons fishing close to the dam and supposed it to be permissible. On the strength of this statement other arrests are expected.

District Attorney Brown is this afternoon investigating a case of alleged shooting in a local restaurant, in which nobody was hurt. The cook is alleged to have abused one of the waitresses and was in turn attacked by the proprietor, who is said to have fired a revolver three times.
