PRICES IN BORDEAUX.

Ham Ninety Cents a Slice and Ice Ten Cents a Cupful.

"American women wouldn't complain about the prices of meats here if they once tried living in Bordeaux," said a New York woman who has just returned from a year of housekeeping in that French city. "The cheapest meat obtainable there is ham," she explained, "and that costs 90 cents a slice. Chickens are so expensive that every scrap of them, even to the head, is made use of by the Bordeaux cook. I remember my surprise when the first plate of chicken soup was placed before me at my own table to behold funny little red scraps floating through it. The waitress explained that those were the chicken's comb, chopped fine. To waste the comb of a chicken is considered an unheard-of extravagance in Bordeaux."

"Meats are not only high in price there, but extremely poor. I soon adopted the custom of the wealthy families and sent my orders to Day, the nearest large city, twice a week and had my meats expressed from there. The meats are no cheaper in Day than in Bordeaux, but they are the best I have ever eaten anywhere. As if to make up for the exorbitant price of meat all vegetables cost a mere nothing, and the poor subsist entirely on vegetarian diet."

"One of my chief delights was the pastries, where the most delicious cakes and tarts could be had for a penny or two each. They were of infinite variety and so delicious that after eating them it is easy to understand why the French say we Americans don't know what cake is. Every customer is given a plate and fork upon entering the patisserie and goes around the counters selecting her own. When you are leaving you are asked the amount of your bill, and your statement is never questioned. You pay what you say you owe."

"But how I did long for a plate of good American ice cream! It is unknown there, except perhaps at a formal dinner, when it is served in infinitesimal portions, frozen in some fancy shape or figure. Every one over there assures you that the French don't care for ice cream and can't be made to patronize a place which serves it. But when you buy ice cream you understand the real reason of its lack of popularity. A piece of ice which costs 10 cents will almost fit inside a coffee cup."—New York Press.

The Grand Vizier.
We have heard a great deal lately about the grand vizier as well as the sublime porte, but the former name is almost as little Turkish as the latter. The Turks, according to "Olysses" (Sir Charles Elliot), seldom use it except to denote a rank as opposed to an office, and the grand vizier is always known as the Sadr Azam, Azam meaning greatest and Sadr literally breast, and so the seat of honor. Vizier signifies a bearer of burdens, the minister being regarded as taking over the burden of public affairs from his master. And a very burdensome office it has sometimes proved. "May you become the sultan's vizier" was a favorite curse in the time of Selim the Grim as a polite way of putting "May you be bowstrung."—London Chronicle.

THE ARTIST TRIO.

JACKSON, Mich.—Miss Mary Agnes Doyle is a very accomplished reader and is far superior to many seen upon the platform lately. All of her readings were given in a charming manner and the evidences of approval given the talented young woman by the great audience were merited in every respect.

DETROIT.—Miss Blanche Deering is, in my opinion, the most perfect development of the natural musician that I have ever had the satisfaction of knowing, in that the great promise she gave as a child has been verified to a remarkable degree. By her own industry and musical mentality, she has mastered the technique and readings of an exceptionally varied repertoire so that, wherever she goes, she carries her work triumphantly.—Chas. S. Pushing a wheelbarrow, "Colonial Jack" is due to arrive here sometime next week from the north. He started from Portland, Maine, last June on a wager that he could push the wheelbarrow around the borders of the United States, a distance of 9000 miles in 400 days or less. If he loses he has agreed to furnish 2,000 copies of a book which he intends to write on his travels, to the one with whom he made the wager. In case he wins he is to receive a thousand dollars. He is ahead of his schedule and is confident of winning. "Jack" left Salem early Tuesday morning.
