Regular meeting of the Ladies' Commercial Club was held Monday evening. A number of routine matters were discussed and nine new members were elected. They anticipate a very large increase in membership soon as the Club will be at home in the new Commercial Club headquarters within a few weeks. These ladies are all real live boosters for Roseburg and are doing good work for the upbuilding and beautifying of the town.

Messrs. Thompson and Rowley, of Portland, who were here last week looking into the matter of an electric road from Roseburg to Coos Bay, returned from Marshfield about 3 o'clock Sunday morning and left on the next train for Portland, without making any statement as to the result of their visit. This afternoon H. T. McCallen had a conversation with Mr. Rowley over the long distance phone to Portland and Mr. Rowley gave the information that Mr. Thompson was favorably impressed with the conditions from a hasty inspection of the country, and that the Roseburg Commercial Club will be advised by letter soon as to what action, if any, will next be taken.

PORTLAND BANK ROBBED.

Robbers Escape With $17,000—Dropped a Roll of $200.

Special to the Evening Review.

PORTLAND, Or., Dec. 8.—All efforts last night and this morning failed to get trace of the three unmasked men who about six o'clock last evening held up and robbed the East Side bank at the corner of Grand Avenue and East Washington streets, in this city.

Their booty, consisting of about $17,000 in gold, silver and currency, was dumped into two sacks and carried with them as they ran down the street and disappeared. Six shots were fired after them by H. S. Newhall, president of the bank, and his son, Roger Newhall, but none took effect. The police have searched every part of the city but have discovered no clew. Portland citizens are shocked at this bold robbery, being unable to understand how three robbers could hold up the bank's president and cashier right on the busiest thoroughfare on the east side of the river, with scores of pedestrians constantly passing, and make good their escape. Persons passing saw the robber taking money from the Newhalls inside the bank but did not realize what was going on until the bandits had flown and their victims gave the alarm.

One of today's developments in the case was the finding of the horse and buggy in which the robbers escaped. The outfit had been abandoned some distance from the bank, and nearby, in the mud, lay a roll of currency amounting to $200. The robbers hired a rig at a stable shortly before the robbery.

All Done in Two Minutes.

Just two minutes were required to complete a robbery that has few precedents for desperation and daring. Entering the bank, in the heart of the East Side business section at an hour when hundreds of people were on the streets, the leader and most determined of the three men, at pistol point forced Mr. Newhall and his son, into Mr. Newhall's private office. This done two men who were waiting outside jumped inside the swinging door, and while one stood with a cocked revolver watching the entrance, the other held sacks into which the leader dumped the money from the counter and cash tills. They left $300 in silver half dollars and did not go into the vault, which was open, evidently realizing that they had all they could carry away.

Three Witness Hold-Up.

Two young women on their way homeward, stood in front of the bank and saw the robbery, but at the moment did not realize what was taking place.

I. D. Coulson, head bookkeeper, who had stepped out of the bank to mail a letter across the street, was also a witness. He ran at once calling for an officer. Patrolman Sherwood, who had passed a few minutes before. But in a twinkling the robbers had their plunder sacked and were out of the bank and running out East Washington street into the thick darkness.

The young women, Miss Bertha Kingston, of 195 East Sixth street, and Miss Myrtle Ramsey, ran into the street for fear of being knocked down by the fugitives. It is due to them that a detailed description of the three robbers was obtained. For, while the Newhalls saw the leader of the desperate trio clearly, they caught only a glimpse of the other two men.

Leader's Desperate Chances.

The leading spirit of the robbery, a man of 38, smooth shaved and wearing seedy clothes, took all the desperate chances and did the actual work of taking the money. Although heavy set and clumsy of appearance, he leaped through the teller's wicket with marked agility, forced the officials into the private room, scooped the money through the wicket into the sacks held by one accomplice, leaped back into the corridor with his back to the Newhalls and left the bank only after the other two men were well clear of the door, each of them carrying a sack. He ran behind for a time, weapon in hand, evidently intent on protecting the money-carriers from a rear fire. But after covering a block he was seen to join his two assistants and assist one of his confederates carry a gunny sack in which $8000 in gold had been thrown.

MISSOURI HENS PROFITABLE.

TRENTON, Mo., Dec. 8.—That the Missouri hen has made a gain of $5,000,000 last year in the value of her surplus products, making a total of $45,000,000 realized from the poultry industry in this state during the last year, is the startling statement of the officials of the Missouri Poultry Association, which opened its annual show here today. The show is one of the largest in the country and aside from the hundreds of Missouri exhibits, there are displays of thoroughbred poultry from a dozen other states.

The Missouri Poultry Association is the official organization of Missouri and receives a $4000 biennial appropriation from the state. Missourians are taking hold of thoroughbred poultry with a vengeance and the state show affords you an opportunity to get in touch with those who are in the market for eggs or stock. In addition to paying the largest premiums paid in America fifty silver cups are also offered at this show, and other specials galore.

Big Poultry Show.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Dec. 8.—One of the best poultry shows ever held in South Carolina was opened today by the Charleston Poultry Association and will extend through four days. This is the fifth annual exhibition of the association and is the biggest in its history.
